Mrs. W. P. Greeley and daughters in Europe for a brief visit.

Our Mr. McCall is in quite a demand for public political speaking.

The Unitarian Society have accepted the resignation of Rev. J. S. Marsh.

According to the new arrangement the postmaster here gets a slight increase of salary.

Things here are beginning to put on the customary air of quiet and repose which is a characteristic of the vacation season.

On Mondays and Wednesdays the public library will be open only from 4 to 6 o'clock, p. m. Hours for Saturdays unchanged.

Mrs. C. A. Russell and her daughter Mrs. Thompson with her husband have gone to Cape Travers, P. E. I., for their summer vacation. It is a charming place to spend the hot weather at.

How some of our folks do love to fling figurative mud at our beautiful Town House. "Order" took his turn at it in the Star last week, but I notice the building stands there just the same. Some people do love to growl and find fault.

EDITOR WOBURN JOURNAL.

Dear Sir—I send you the following item:

The Council called by the church in North Woburn, August 1, 1888.

July 2nd and arrived at the following result:

Whereas, The Rev. Chas. Anderson has tendered his resignation of his pastorate of the respective churches of Burlington and No. Woburn, we, the Council, called to advise in the premises, in view of the official call of Mr. Anderson to a pastorate in Robert College, Constantinople, hereby recommended the dissolution of the pastoral relation, and in coming to this conclusion we desire,

First: To express our grateful joy that a pastorate covering so many years and crowned after long trial and many sacrifices with rich spiritual and material, to both these churches, as severed only by the special call of Providence, to a fitting and noble position, sterling qualities of christian scholarship, consecration, and self-sacrifice.

Second: We desire also to express our high appreciation of the personal qualities which as a pastor and preacher have endeared brother Anderson to our churches and brethren irrespective of race or nationality, and as a pastor and christian counselor have been the means of leading many souls to open confession of the Son Jesus, and we are assured that in the foreign field to which he is called, he will continue to be an eminent service to the kingdom of Christ at this critical time, and we do therefore affectionately commend him to the fellowship of the brethren with whom he is to labor.

Third: While we cannot but express our tenderest sympathy with the churches soon to lose their pastor, yet we rejoice that God has brought them under his leadership to so high a state of piety, and that they will be able to guide them in their choice of another leader, that the work of their hands may be established and the glory of the Lord appear to their children.

REV. J. G. FOLLARD, Pastor, Church of Christ, No. 100, Main St., Woburn, Mass.

Respectfully, J. P. BERRY.

A word to workmen: A plan matter of fact suggestion to them which may find of use. The free-trade papers are trying to make out that it is the manufacturers who are interested in preventing any free-trade legislation. We advise our friends who work by the day for a living not to be deceived by any such humbuggery. The manufacturers in America would be able to adjust themselves to a new order of things. They can run their machinery, they can get out goods, they can do business as cheaply as a third of what they are now provided only they get their labor as cheaply. If the free trade idea comes in, they will get their labor as low as they will not hire it. That is all there is to that. The only way they can be injured permanently will be by the constant refusal of the working men in this country to work for less money. In England, our manufacturers can make goods just as profitably and sell them at as cheaply as the English manufacturers. It may cost them some temporary embarrassment, but just as sure as the English goods are brought in more cheaply than they are now, our manufacturers have either to stop work or else reduce wages. That is the proposition that confronts the American laboring man, and between the two, rather than keep idle, they will have to work for less money. There is the whole tariff question in a nutshell, and it is common to see thousands of workmen who read The Record for their consideration.

About the Town Meeting.

WOBURN, July 9, 1888.

Editor of Journal.—In view of the fact that much bitterness of feeling has been engendered by the action of a member of the Selectmen, and subsequent action of the town in spirit of the citizens of the town a spirit of fairness has been manifested which would imply an ignorance of the facts of the case. I take it upon myself in the interest of justice and fair play to reply to some of the charges made in relation to the above mentioned action of the Selectmen.

First, religious persecution: a petition to stop the Salvation Army from parading in the streets of Woburn. The action taken on that petition was unanimous thus indicating a harmony of sentiment which the cry of religious persecution would seem to imply did not exist.

In regard to the disgraceful conduct of certain parties at the town meeting of July 9th, it certainly reflected on the intelligence and respectability of the town. Conduct which must have surprised and distressed every fair minded citizen and which I never supposed would emanate from any but the hoodlum element of society, was strongly expressive of that blind bigotry which has done so much to retard the progress of true christianity in any manner of fraternal regard which should ever exist, and menace the equal rights to which all are entitled and which all should allow.

In conclusion let me add that the members of that religious set to whom has been attributed the origin of this war of the town in any manner they thought fit, and in this particular case the disturber or disturbers can be found in the household of those who first raised this cry of religious persecution.

Second, the charge of religious persecution: a petition to stop the Salvation Army from parading in the streets of Woburn. The action taken on that petition was unanimous thus indicating a harmony of sentiment which the cry of religious persecution would seem to imply did not exist.

Why Baking Powders Are Best.

(From Hall's Journal of Health.)

Baking powder is a property compounded, and containing pure cream of tartar, are more convenient than yeast; and bread and pastry made with them are just as wholesome, and far more palatable.

We are in entire sympathy with the manufacturers of the Royal Baking Powder—who commenced the use of this powder in the war against the use of adulterated baking powder.

Before committing ourselves, however, we made tests of a sufficient number of the baking powders to satisfy ourselves that the substitution of alum for cream of tartar in their composition had not been over-estimated, while a careful examination of the Royal Baking Powder confirms our belief that Dr. Mott, the Government Chemist, when he singled out and commended this powder for its wholesomeness did it wholly in the interests of the public.

We do not hesitate to say that the Royal Baking Powder people deserve the gratitude of the community whom they are endeavoring to protect.

Emperor Francis Joseph has granted the request of Count Kaivily, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador at London, to retire from active service. His Majesty has conferred the Grand Cross of St. Stephen upon the Count and has sent him an autograph letter in which he refers to the Count's services in terms of warm praise.

A great many of our people attend the Woburn open-air band concerts.

Elmer D. and Parker Fletcher were guests at Tray's Inn, Jackson, N. H., last week.

C. S. Hunt sampled the larder of the Pavilion, Amisquam, a few days since, and approved of it.

Miss Susie Wakefield will take the place of Miss R. A. Holbrook of the Gifford primary school.

Many Winchester people take the fine, comfortable open horse cars for afternoon and evening drives.

Miss Emerson, the teacher, will spend the hot spell at Lebanon, Maine. It is a nice place for huckleberries.

The Master of our High School, Mr. E. D. Lovering, has gone to Randolph for his vacation rest and recuperation.

I hear that the Republican Club of this town is in a flourishing condition. It will give a good account of itself next November.

Miss Spaulding has resigned her position in the High School. She has been a very successful teacher and her resignation is regretted.

Norridgewock, on the Kennebec, is the present resting place of Miss Susie E. Fletcher, and a beautiful and quiet spot it is for that purpose.

Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Maxwell will enjoy their outing, or a part of it, in New York and Philadelphia. They propose to have a jolly good time.

Mr. Small [S. C.], it is understood, will vote for Fiske and Brooks, prohibition candidates.—Star. Well, I don't know of any law in this State that prohibits a man from making a fool of himself.

Why don't somebody hurry up and give "Traveler" (in Star) a North Woburn Street Railway time-table? He seems to be suffering for one. What would some of our good people do if deprived of the privilege of growing?

The Calumet Club, our leading fashionable society organization, is bound to have larger and better rooms for club use. It recently chose a committee to look into the matter and report. The club will quite likely increase in numbers next fall and winter.

Mr. A. G. Greeley, for many years a resident of the South End, and latterly residing at the Kensington, Boston, died at Winchester on Friday. Mr. Greeley has been in poor health, suffering from indigestion. He was formerly in the wholesale grocery business, but retired many years ago, and has of late devoted his time to the investment of his large property. Mr. Greeley was a gentleman much respected in financial and social circles.

A Democrat of Boston having accused General Corse of lukewarmness towards the Democratic cause and of a desire on his part to see the Republicans triumph this fall on the tariff issue, he came out the other day and not only denied the self impeachment but said he had promised the Winchester Democracy to contribute the sum of $100 to the campaign fund. Nevertheless, General Corse is not a very staunch Democrat this year, and were he not postmaster of Boston I have my doubts about his voting for Grover Cleveland, whom he cannot but in his innermost soul despise.

Of course the inhabitants of Winchester are interested to a greater or less degree in everything that pertains to Woburn and its future, and the preliminary steps taken to organize the new city government are being watched here more or less. There is undoubtedly much honor to be attached to the first Mayor, and consequently there are many gentlemen who are placing themselves in the hands of their friends who think the office would be honored by their election to it. The citizens, however, propose to look around awhile, and secure someone who will be an honor to the office, which they cannot but do.

sider will also be an honor to the holder.—Star. The interest which the Star takes in Woburn affairs must be quite gratifying to the people of new city.

The following, which I cut from the Boston Evening Record, would seem to indicate that the Democracy of Winchester are in a bad way. They are not a "happy family" any more than they are at Malden. The simple truth of the matter is, Gen. Corse has no fellow-feeling with the rank and file of the Democracy, and the Democracy take no interest in the present campaign—there is too much free trade in their side of it to be palatable to working men. But I give you the interview:

WINCHESTER, July 17.—This is the home of Gen. Corse, and the affair between him and the Irish democrats has become the absorbing topic. In some way the rumor gained circulation that the witness by whom Mr. Riley hoped to prove the truth of his allegation in regard to the general and the campaign fund as a resident of this town. Inquiry among the leading democrats brought to light the fact that the story in question has been freely circulated, and that Mr. Riley had no monopoly of the information. It was the common property of at least a dozen men who compose the inner circle of the democratic party in this place, and who were congregated together one night previous to the last fall election.

It was to this inner circle that the witness in question made his report after appealing to Gen. Corse in behalf of the depleted treasury of the city committee. The reporter found a half dozen or more of the gentlemen who were present when this interesting interview was had and they all said Mr. Riley was right except in minor details, and that they shared the sentiments of that gentleman.

Last evening Mr. Riley went to the residence of Mr. T. P. McGuinity. He held a long interview with Mr. McGuinity, and had great difficulty in inducing Mr. McGuinity to allow his name to appear in print in connection with the affair, pleading personal and political grounds. Gen. Corse, to whom he felt that a statement of the truth in the matter would be doing an act of absolute injury.

His friendship to Mr. Riley carried the day, and since he could give no other way in which to place that gentleman right in the eyes of the public, he consented to make a statement.

Here it is:—
I, the undersigned, assert on my word and honor, as a man, that the following statement is the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. That I went to the house of Gen. J. M. Corse in Winchester, on a Sunday evening just before the gubernatorial election last fall, to see whether he was willing to contribute to the democratic campaign fund. He replied to my inquiry that:—
"When a child gets refractory it needs a whipping—and a d—d bad whipping."

Then I said: "I hope we won't get a very bad whipping."
Gen. Corse replied: "Ames is a good enough man, and so is Lovering, but we want them to wipe the ground with us, it will do us good."

I said to him then: "General, there are two elements in the democratic party. Suppose the element that sweeps the ground with us this year, that the other element turn round and sweep the ground with us next year?"
His reply was: "Don't be alarmed; you couldn't drive that element out of the party with a club."
He further: "We don't want to pay any poll taxes this year. But I will subscribe a little something to keep the organization intact for next year."
(Signed) THOMAS P. MCGUINITY.

By this it will be seen that Mr. Riley's original statement was in substance correct. The democrats have hoisted no flag at all up to the present time. Owing to internal dissensions in the city committee founded on diverse tariff views, no steps at all have been taken to organize for the campaign. The democrats of this place are in much the same plight that the democrats of Malden are.

Four years ago the town went democratic by a majority; this year it is generally conceded that it will go republican by at least 200 majority. The tariff did it.

Finerty Rebels.

CHICAGO, July 17.—In speaking of the new explanation of the Pope's re- script on the Irish question, ex-Congressman Finerty of this city said:—
"It is an interference in Irish politics. If Archbishop Walsh had taken the ground he should have taken, this second letter would never have been sent. If the Irish bishops of the 19th century had the backbone of the English bishops of the 13th century, they could easily have brought Leo XIII to terms. As it is, the fight falls on the people."

"The issue is made at last."
"For the last 700 years the Irish people have been suffering the tortures of the damned, because of papal interference in Irish affairs. Next to England, Rome has been Ireland's greatest political enemy, and it is on questions of politics now alone, and on matters of faith, that I am speaking."

"To have the hopes of Ireland levelled to the ground, the fathers and the brothers and the sons butchered, the wives, sisters and daughters outraged, the infants piked or bayonnetted, and all promiscuously starving, is a combination of horrors before which the devil himself must stand appalled. If that is legitimate government, and Pope Leo XIII maintains that it is, then legitimate government springs from the devil and not from God, and it should be opposed, whether the Premier of England or the Pope of Rome is its mouthpiece."

"The Pope of Rome has no power to damn me or any other Catholic. His latest utterance is an outrage on Irish Catholic manhood and womanhood. The Pope of Rome, the head of the Catholic church, is in all matters of religion supreme, but the Pope of Rome, an Italian prince, with an Italian policy to carry out, is no matter what expense to other Catholic people, is a fair subject for Irish criticism, and it is from this standpoint I criticize him."
"I am a Catholic, I am a believer in the Catholic church, but I am an Irishman and not an Italian, and I am not to be sacrificed for the needs of Italian diplomacy."

Literary Notices.

THE MUSICAL HERALD for July has made its appearance on time. Besides several pieces of new music the number contains a large amount of musical news, gossip and editorials, which musical people will find of interest. The HERALD is published by the Musical Herald Co., Boston.

The August PETERSON is as fresh and interesting as a magazine can be. The steel engraving, Good-Bye, Papa, is one of those bewitching pictures for which PETERSON is famous. The opening article is a beautifully-illustrated tale by Emily Lennox, and then follows A Difficult Lesson, one of the daintiest society-sketches we have read in a long while. The initial chapters of A Louisiana Success are as delightful as was to be expected from the author of that popular novel, A Transplanted Rose. It is no secret that the story is a transcript of the youthful career of one of the most beautiful Americans of the present day—a lady who, after a phenomenal social success in this country and Europe, married the eldest son of an English duke. The other stories are all good; any one of them is original enough to make the number noticeable. A valuable paper, Talks by a Trained Nurse, would alone be worth a year's subscription. The needlework, fancy article, and household departments are as complete as ever. In short, PETERSON, as usual, is a treasury of literature, art, and religion. Terms: Two Dollars a year. Address: PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Fred Douglass in judicious in his determination to keep away from the Cleveland show, misnamed a colored men's national convention, which is supposed to be about to assemble in Indianapolis. The spurious character of the "convention" is thoroughly understood, and if Douglass should attend for the purpose of exposing its true purpose to his people in a speech, it would be like firing a columbiad to kill a tomit.

It is now announced that the Baltimore Sun interview with Secretary Bayard was not "authorized," and those views which have been most criticized are those for which the Secretary disclaims responsibility. The Sun nevertheless, is a trustworthy organ of the Administration, and we are informed that the Secretary denies that he expressed himself very much as reported.

General Harrison's late attack of neuralgia was perfectly natural, though unfortunate, effect of the cordial mauling for the purpose of exposing its true purpose to his people in a speech, it would be like firing a columbiad to kill a tomit.

A boy in a Newark, N. J., school scratched his head for a long time before attempting to "compare the animals of North America with those of Europe." At last, in his desire to say something, he wrote: "The animals of North America are not as large as those of Europe but they get there just the same."

A Question of Health.

WHAT BAKING POWDER SHALL WE USE?

This plain question comes home to every housewife. We are striving for a pure and wholesome food, and this cannot be had with the use of impure or poisonous baking powder. There can be no longer a question that all the cheaper, lower grades of baking powders contain either alum, lime or phosphoric acid. As both as we may be to admit so much against what may have been some of our household gods, there can be no gainsaying the unanimous testimony of the official chemists. Indeed, analysts seem to find no baking powder entirely free from some of these objectionable ingredients except the Royal, and that they report as chemically pure. We find some of the baking powders advertised as pure, to contain, under the tests of Professors Chandler, Habershaw and others, nearly twelve per cent of tartar. This we presume, accounts for their lack of leavening power as sometimes complained of by the cook, and for the bitter taste frequently in the biscuits so frequently complained of by our ladies.

But aside from the inferiority of the work done by these powders, the physicians assure us time and again that tartar is the system in such quantities as this are injurious. Their physiological effects are indigestion, dyspepsia, or worse evils.

The question naturally arises, why do these cheap baking powder makers use these things? Alum is three cents a pound, lime still cheaper, while cream of tartar costs thirty-five or forty. The reasons for the chemical purity of the Royal Baking Powder were recently given in the New York Times in an interesting description of a new method for refining argols, or crude cream of tartar. It seems that it is only under this process that cream of tartar can be freed from the lime natural to it and rendered chemically pure; that the patents and plant for this cost the Royal Baking Powder Company about half a million dollars, and that they maintain exclusive control of the rights.

Professor McMurtrie, late chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., made an examination of this process, and reported upon the results, obtained in the refined cream of tartar. The following extract from his report would seem to answer the question repeated at the head of this article, and which is so frequently asked by the housekeeper:—
"I have examined the cream of tartar used by the Royal Baking Powder Company in the manufacture of it of the best quality, and find it to be perfectly pure and free from lime in any form. The chemical tests to which I have submitted the Royal Baking Powder prove it perfectly healthful and free from every deleterious substance. The Royal Baking Powder is purest in quality and highest in price of any baking powder of which I have knowledge."

A story is told of a wealthy but parsimonious woman who was not easily affected by the appearance of misery. Being informed that a hungry beggar was eating grass in the front of the house, she exclaimed, "Poor man, take him to the back yard and let him eat the grass there. It grows higher."

Woman's Column.

A Remarkable Woman.

There is a prevalent idea that a woman who possesses business and financial ability, and who holds any public position, is sure to be a poor housekeeper, and actually more so. A striking illustration of the fallacy of this idea is furnished by the case of Mrs. Mary E. H. G. Dow of Dover, N. H., who has lately become famous as the president of the Dover House Railroad Co. Mrs. Dow is successful in all household arts as in the management of her large outside business. She took the first premium at the New Hampshire State Fair twice for the best pie and canned fruit; the first premium for best brown and white bread and butter; the first premium for imported French Houdan and Buff Cochins fowls. She had best darning at the State Fair, having a stocking on exhibition that was more durable than anything else, there not being any of the original part of the foot visible, but all a shapely and smoothly darning mass; also for greatest number of different patterns of tatting, crocheted edging and knitted lace, many of which patterns she originated herself; also first prize for best varieties of cake and frostings, and a best Charlotte Russe made of whipped cream, also French and English cooked meats. She has been very successful in raising celery, grapes, and several kinds of small fruits, such as gooseberries, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, currants, pears, apricots, Russian mulberries, etc. She has the finest asparagus bed in Dover, every root of which she set out herself, and the Frenches were properly prepared. She raises the finest, largest, and best flavored mushrooms ever seen in the "Granite State." She learned this art in France. She has made and successfully sold butter from fifteen cows at one time. In addition to this, she is a good shot with gun, rifle, or pistol, enjoys fishing, and swimming, and has taken prizes for swimming and floating. She thoroughly understands horses, and has raised and successfully broken colts. She understands much about treating sick and disabled horses; and she can tell a good horse as well as any professional horse dealer.

As a young girl, she took part with Nellie Grant in the great Sanitary Fair in St. Louis, in aid of the wounded soldiers, and her acting was so good as to make some of her friends wish that she would go upon the stage.

For many years she was the successful assistant principal of the Rochester High School, and afterwards in St. Louis, Mo., she was for three years instructor in French and German in a well known female academy. Mrs. Dow has been twice married, and is the mother of three children. Before her marriage she was correspondent for several newspapers, among the Boston Journal and Traveller. The Street Railway Gazette, from which we have taken most of the foregoing particulars of a really remarkable career, says in conclusion: "Mrs. Dow stands very high in the estimation of her neighbors and wide circle of friends. Her reputation is the best all round. And her character is like that of Caesar's wife, above suspicion."

Miss Edwards investigated maps and pictures of the place, charts marking and low water in the channels, and actual bills of lading to show what kind of goods were shipped. She talked with officers and sailors of experience at the time, and made special study of naval terms under the Admiral Sir Thomas Hastings. So, when the Saturday evening—himself presumably a landman—sneered at the book as full of "woman's seamanship," the Admiral indignantly declared that he would wouchee for every word of it.

WOMEN IN ANCIENT ROME.

Matrons Who Were Not to Be Trifled With—A Case of Wholesale Poisoning. The Roman records show that it was not safe to trifle with the feelings of Roman women. They were, like Roman men, of a great decision of character, and when provoked could do the most daring deeds, reckless of the consequences. If they were treated kindly and on equal terms, they were the best of wives, and I am convinced that their goodness and firmness were the most effectual causes of the freedom which they attained; but if insulted, they put into force their traditional power and claimed supreme domination over their husbands. The history of Rome throws a lurid light on this aspect of their character; for occasionally they took men and wild vengeance when husbands went too far in their domestic actions. I will advance one or two instances of this:

In the year 331 B. C. many of the Roman citizens, and especially many of the Roman nobles, were attacked by an unknown disease, which showed the same symptoms in all, and nearly all perished. The cause was wrapped in obscurity, but at length a maid servant went to a curio shop, and she could not resist the temptation of the gold and silver ornaments of the origin of the disease, but would not do so unless service were given her that she would suffer no harm in consequence. The curio dealer brought the matter before the senate, and the senate consulted the senate, and a resolution was passed guaranteeing safety to the maid servant. Whereupon she declared that the deaths of the nobles were caused by the ornaments in the habit of compounding drugs, and she could take the officials to a house in which they would come upon the matrons who engaged in the operation.

The officials accepted her offer, followed her and found, as she had said, the matrons compounding drugs. About twenty of them were conveyed to the Forum, and were subjected to an examination on their doings. Two of them, of noble family and with patrician names, Cornelia and Sergia, affirmed that the drugs were perfectly wholesome. That could easily be tested, and the two matrons were requested to prove their truthfulness by drinking the mixture. The two matrons begged to be left with the rest of their associates, but within sight of the people. Permission was granted, a few words were exchanged, and then all of the matrons came back, boldly quaffed the liquor, and died in consequence. Then a search was made for all the matrons who had been engaged in this conspiracy, and 170 were found guilty. The men explained the occurrence by asserting that the women were infuriated, but probably they knew well why recourse was had to such violent measures. That the Roman matrons were not likely to be subjected to tyranny without making an effort in one way or another to put an end to it.

An occurrence of a similar nature took place in 180 B. C. In this case there was a search for all the matrons who had been engaged in this conspiracy, and 170 were found guilty. The men explained the occurrence by asserting that the women were infuriated, but probably they knew well why recourse was had to such violent measures. That the Roman matrons were not likely to be subjected to tyranny without making an effort in one way or another to put an end to it.

Money Saved by Sanitation. Medical men have long been familiar with the fact that sanitation has been saving to the community at large in doctors' bills, in nursing and even in days of labor to the industrial classes.

Mr. Hay, in the White House, this same Eliza started most of the vexing questions in Washington etiquette—the entire chapter is piquant reading for everybody. Susan Coolidge has a fine story, Eliza's Choice. How to Observe Nature tells some charming secrets. Geraldine Butts has a beautiful illustrated ballad, The Little Prince. Edward Everett Ross, in The Story of the Common Game, gives an account of The Arctique Elections when he was a boy. Mrs. Humphrey tells how to keep Mosquitoes Away. Oscar Fay Adams writes the biography of the great French fairy-story-teller and politician, La Fontaine. Mrs. Leonard describes The Tsong Tsing Tsiu. In Double Basses Mrs. Sherwood draws a good picture of a fashionable New York rector and parishioners, while Mrs. Crownshield, in Plucky Snails: His Story, gives a rollicking experience among the boys on a training-school and tells how they executed Charlie Noble. Other delightful things too numerous to mention. All for 20 cents. $2.40 a year. The Story of the Common Game, Publishers, Boston, Mass.

There is no doubt in our mind, but what the people living on Washington street would be greatly benefited were the horse car tracks extended from the Centre to the Highlands. Mr. John Maxwell is about to rebuild his tannery which was destroyed by fire a year or two ago. I'm glad to hear it. Mr. Maxwell is one of the most enterprising and liberal handed citizens of Winchester and his prosperity is a source of gratification to everyone.

Miss Sullivan of Boston, sister to Mr. Killings' first girl, was out to visit her sister last Friday. In the course of conversation the visitor said that it seemed to her as if all the healthy people were dying off this summer, while the sick were getting well. Saturday word was received from Winchester that Miss Sullivan had dropped dead in the streets of Boston from heart disease.—Star.

Mr. Small (S. C.), it is understood, will vote for Fiske and Brooks, prohibition candidates.—Star. Well, I don't know of any law in this State that prohibits a man from making a fool of himself.—[JOURNAL.] A man that has the courage of his convictions is anything but a fool. 'Tis the fool who has no convictions. Such talk as the above only injures the Republican party. Mr. Small is a man of principle who is always foremost in what he believes to be right, and he is not ashamed to say so.—Star.—Well, what are you going to do about it?

Mr. John Maxwell has received letters from his daughters Jennie and Vic giving an account of their exceedingly pleasant voyage across the Atlantic, safe arrival on the soil of "the right little, bright little, tight little Isle," and their perfect health. They sailed from Boston two weeks ago last Saturday and arrived at Liverpool the next Monday week, from which city they soon proceeded to London. They went over under the protection of Mr. Hemmingway, a prominent business man of London, who is about to settle and make a home in this country. He is a particular friend of Mr. Maxwell, father of the young ladies, in whose care they were placed. Mr. Hemming-way's sister, who lives in London, will accompany Miss Jennie and Vic in their tour through France, Belgium, Germany and other European countries, which will add to the pleasure of their trip. Several of their acquaintances from Medford and neighborhood went over in the same steamer, all together making a very nice party.

Wilmington.

The dwelling-house being erected for Mr. Charles McIntosh begins to loom up. It is a very sightly building and will be a credit to the town. Mr. John Nelson of Somerville has also broken ground for a new residence. It is to be located on what is known as the "Plains" on the Reading road.

The new High School building is making rapid progress and it is expected will be finished in season for occupation this fall. There seems to be considerable opposition to providing the new building with steam heat, as the expense would be rather more than the townspeople consider necessary, while a good furnace would fully answer the purpose with less expense and less danger.

It appears that the anticipations of the residents near the Lowell depot will soon be realized. Manager Furber visited the town a week ago and selected a site, whereon the new buildings are to be located. It is several rods westerly of the present station and is considered as good a location as can be found in this vicinity. It is to be hoped that Manager Furber will go ahead, as it is imperatively necessary more commodious quarters should be furnished. The town is steadily increasing and there is great need for better facilities than the people at present enjoy.

The Republican Club met in Town Hall, Saturday, July 28, at 8 o'clock. Owing to the inclement weather the number that turned out was not very large, but made up enthusiasm for what it lacked in point of numbers. It was voted to ask for admission to the Republican League of Massachusetts and Frank W. Kidder was appointed delegate to represent Wilmington. It was also voted to instruct the trustees to circulate subscription papers for the purpose of collecting money to purchase a campaign flag and at the end of the meeting some $15 were subscribed by the members present. Frank W. Kidder and Dr. Henry Hiller were appointed a committee to select a speaker for a rally to be held within three or four weeks. Particulars will be made known in due season.

"Does This Look Like Free Trade?"

The Hon. Roger Q. Mills of Texas is chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the Fifty-third Congress. On the Fourth of July in a public address delivered in the city of New York, in analyzing his tariff bill, used the following words:—"Does this look like free trade?"

The Mills bill declares for:

Free trade in lumber which we produce to the value of $300,000,000 annually.

Free trade in wool, of which we produce over 300,000,000 pounds annually.

Free trade in salt, of which we produce nearly 40,000,000 bushels annually.

Free trade in flax, hemp, jute and other fibres.

Free trade in cement, potash, lime and brick.

Free trade in meats, game and poultry.

Free trade in vegetables, peas and beans.

Free trade in stone.

Free trade in at least 100 other articles produced in this country, most of which would be produced in sufficient quantities for home consumption if properly protected.

Queen Elizabeth of Romania was educated by Dr. Lavater, the niece of the celebrated physiognomist.

An Ocean Voyage.

A boat, a boat to cross the ferry. With lightness hearts we'll all be merry: To Erin's shores, and Albion's too, And continental nations.

So here we all are, every one of our party of ten, equipped for a voyage across the Atlantic from New York in the Cunard steamship Eturia. The hurrycanny of getting ready is now over, we go aboard, "all those going" are requested to "go ashore," the bell is rung, the whistle blown, the hawsers cast off, the order given, three tugs that looked like rowboats alongside the great ship pull her by the stern out of her dock, turn her round, point her bows seaward, the engineer puts his hand to the throttle, the huge monster confined below stretches his enormous steel sinews to the work, and amid the waving of handkerchiefs and the goodbyes of friends we part from our native shores and steam out into the broad Atlantic bound on a pleasure trip to the "old country." At first we go slow, like Gulliver among the Lilliputians, to avoid doing damage to the numerous vessels and to get to the bar at the right time of the tide, as she draws twenty-eight feet of water; but soon we are out at sea, the course is laid, more steam is let on, we gain, gain in speed, ten, twelve, fifteen, eighteen, yes even twenty miles per hour is reached, Sandy Hook and the Highlands of Neversink sink below the horizon, night closes in, and we are left alone on the vast waste of waters. But alone here with us means but little; we are a city of ourselves, a city of 830 persons, 565 cabin passengers, 65 intermediate, the rest crew, &c. Our ship's measurement is 8,000 tons. She is 500 feet long and consumes 350 tons of coal per day; she has streets, lanes, telephones, offices, shops, a complete fire-department, electric lights and bells, and, in short, all city conveniences, including a smoking room in which pipes are formed to let on the speed of the vessel, the number of miles she will make in the next twenty-four hours, when she will sight Saint Light, how long the trip will be, &c.

What a difference in the few years since Dickens came over in the Britannia, and on arriving in America wrote an article to the English papers advising all not to cross the Atlantic in a steamship, as it was an impractical thing, full of dangers which could never be escaped, and must be abandoned; but now here we are in a steam palace of 8,000 tons capacity, that makes the passages across in about six days with the regularity of an express train of cars, and even more safely to the passengers, ship and freight.

By the way, as sea sickness is the great terror of new sea voyagers I will give an infallible (?) remedy for the dreaded de mer which I obtained from an "old salt" on board one evening. Says he: "Come to anchor on the captain and I will spin you a yarn or two, and give you a sure remedy for sea sickness, which as soon as one takes it, will luff, put its helm hard to port, soon be full down astern, and never come aboard during the voyage or cross your bows." Says he, "You must take a piece of the skin of a sea serpent, make fast a string to it and lay it to a nail so that the shadow of the skin will fall into a pot of water in which is the crushed egg of a hen ten years old, that is the hen must be ten years old, not the egg; then boil the shadow and egg together till the steam assumes the shape of a snake on the surface; then apply the end of a plug of navy tobacco to the bows of the snake, and he will take hold of it, pull him out and let him fall stern on into a gill of real Irish potteen in a bottle, put on the hatches and shake the snake and potteen together till the snake disappears, then keep the hatches on till you need it; and when you start on a sea trip take two drops of the compound aboard before you sail in for rations and you will laugh at the rest while the voyage lasts."

A sea voyage has been so often described, that it is an "old chestnut." For the days it was quite smooth, with few sick; then three days of a little rougher weather with more in their berths and less at table; time of trip 6 days, 3 hours, 45 minutes; beating the record 55 minutes; greatest day's work 461 miles; least 450 miles; landed at Queenstown just after daylight, when the first thing that have in sight was a stork on wheels with the leg-kettles on it, which a son of the Emerald Isle told me was an invention of a Yankee designed to beat the Yankee stoves in the way of convenience for making tea. The custom officer said he could see nothing dutiable (when a shilling had been slipped into his hand) in our trunks, the American flag was hoisted in honor of the large importation of Yankees, and after stumbling over a few dwarf donkeys, we got into the most abominable cars I ever saw and started for Cork amid the cheers of the crowd.

Goodby! will write again later about what I shall see and hear in the "Gem of the Sea."

It is a remarkable fact that the first printed circular that was ever issued by the Siamese government was a proclamation against the importation of opium. This was in 1839. Thus an old heathen king, half a century ago, tried to protect his subjects from the direful effects of that trade, which so-called Christian England still upholds.

"Mine, miner, minus?" This is the upshot of speculations in mining stock.

Martyrs to Headache

Rock relief in vain, until they begin to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Then they regret the years of suffering they might have escaped had they tried this remedy earlier. The trouble was constitutional not local; and, until Ayer's Sarsaparilla did its effective work as an Alterative and Blood Purifier, they were compelled to suffer.

The wife of Samuel Page, 21 Austin st., Lowell, Mass., was, for a long time, subject to severe headaches, the result of stomach and liver disorders. A perfect cure has been effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frank Roberts, 727 Washington st., Boston, says that he formerly had terrible headaches, and until he took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, never found any medicine that would give him relief.

Permanent Relief.
"Every Spring, for years," writes Lizzie W. Deane, 207 Fifth st., Brooklyn, N. Y., "I have had intolerable headaches. I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla last March, and have not had a headache since that time."

"I suffered from headache, indigestion, and debility, and was hardly able to drag myself about the house," writes Mrs. M. M. Lewis, of A. St. Lowell. "After using Ayer's Sarsaparilla, a marvelous change in my case. I now feel strong and well as ever."

When Mrs. Geneva Delongor, of 24 Bridge st., Springfield, Mass., began to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, she had suffered for some years from a serious affection of the kidneys. Every Spring, also, she was afflicted with indigestion, loss of appetite, and indigestion. A friend persuaded her to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and she benefited her wonderfully. Her health is now perfect. Martyrs to headache should try.

HARRY R. HEDGON.
He mounted his stool and rode away. All that of crime and words and dreams that he had seen in his books and dreams.

He drew his rein when the even fall of the moon shone on his hair. What tales of all he had dared and done he told in his book and dreams.

The pleasant land he had traveled over. And his own road, with his trappings red. And his own road, with his trappings red.

And yet, as he rode, his eager look. Had seen the world of his storybooks. And he had seen the world of his storybooks.

That he in the heart of Woburn Land. —August W. Atwater.

A CONSOLIDATION.

The sanctum of the Bloomville Journal was occupied by two persons. One of them sat on a rickety chair, his feet on the table. He was smoking and absent scanning the walls. The sanctum, to his fastidious taste, was not an attractive place, but his friendship for the young editor who was working hard at a desk drew him here every evening. On a table lay great bound files of the Journal. The dust on them was only disturbed when the editor desired to look up some editorial.

The telephone was connected with the table, and on the wall beside it were some fine ornaments which might be traced to the "devil." A big-bodied brass lamp, with the corpse of hundreds of summer insects glued to it by the exuding coal-oil, stood on the table. Somebody had improvised a shade by cutting a hole in a piece of paper and putting it over the chimney. The crucible bottle, inkstand and shears were side by side, as if ready to abet each other in any undertaking. A window opened into a back room, and a begrimed face appeared at it and called.

"Copy, sir." This "sir" was a compliment only bestowed upon the editor, the "devil" having no respect for any dignity less than that.

John Edwards caught up a pile of loose manuscript and handed it in.

"There! he said, 'that will run in for a while. Fulton, if you are in a hurry don't wait for me. I have something I want to write up for my literary department.'"

He threw his head back and paced the apartment, his tall, athletic form seeming to enjoy the freedom of using its legs. He looked around at the dinginess of the room and laughed.

"Shabby place, isn't it, Fulton?"

"I've just been wondering where on earth you get the inspiration for those fine little criticisms of yours. This place is enough to kill genius. Ever been down at Newtown? The Critic it stood as straight as a West Point cadet. Tell you what, John, come down there with me tomorrow night. I've told them about you; we will spend the evening with the family; and you can arrange about the name without any trouble, I know. I think myself the Critic is the better name."

"But, deuce take it! I've built up this paper, put my heart's blood into it. I'm identified with it, and I'll be switched if I give it up. But I'll go with you."

The evening that followed was to Edwards the red-letter evening of his life. Never had he met with such charming entertainment, never such unassuming and pleasant hospitality, as in the Irving mansion.

"Remember, no business to-night," Fulton had said as they pulled the bell. Mr. Irving was not at home, a fact that Edwards had no occasion to regret after he had met the ladies of the household. The easy grace of the mother and daughters, the humor, the music, the charming conversation enthralled him.

When Fulton rose to go, Edwards was surprised. Usually he mortified his errand. He was glad to find that the ladies favored the project. "Only," they said, "you must not expect our Critic to give up its name."

"We shall see tomorrow," laughed Edwards, "after a consultation with the 'chief cook.'"

"Well," said Fulton, when they had walked a square, "what do you think of it?"

Edwards was not smoking. He was quiet and thoughtful. He turned to Fulton and said gravely: "Fulton, they are a family of angels. I've known nice women, but none that compare with these. I see now where their gets his delicacy and refined notions."

Two hours later Edwards said to his friend who was half asleep, "Say, George, have you any claim upon either of those girls?"

"No," murmured Fulton, sleepily; "am thinking of pre-empting the youngest."

"Well, then, as sure as my name is Edwards," John was half-soliloquizing, "hers shall be Edwards, too."

"Whose?" energetically asked his friend, turning over in bed, "the youngest?"

"No, the other one."

"Oh, go to sleep then, and don't bother me with your maunders."

If Edwards did go to sleep, it was not until some very decisive plans had been formed which, for the time being, drove the newspaper consolidation entirely into the background.

It was not nine o'clock when he presented himself at the sanctum the next morning. An office-boy was dusting it and had the windows raised. Edwards smiled as he surveyed it. He walked to the desk, on which stood a vase of flowers, fresh the day before. A pile of letter-heads with "Newtown Weekly Critic, M. W. Irving, editor," printed at the top, lay on the desk. Instinctively, he threw his cigar away. The very act of the place said, "No smoking allowed." He was intent on his admiring examination when there was a step on the stair, and a lady entered with a bouquet in her hand.

"Ah, Miss Irving!" and Edwards stepped forward to greet her as she sank into a large chair. "You fill the editorial chair very well."

"As to draperies, yes," she laughed. "But when I sit to see this elusive M. W. Irving, your brother? I have not many more hours in this pleasant-looking place."

Miss Irving looked archly at him. "Have you not guessed that M. W. Irving is myself? Why Washington Irving. They had to get our distant, gauntish relative's name somewhere."

She smiled and looked at Edwards. "I'm a little bit of a puzzle, but I'm not as perplexity was on his face."

"But," he gasped, "your brother, the editor?"

"I am the editor," she said quietly, disliking to laugh at him in his embarrassment. "It was your own mistake, Mr. Edwards, and it was so funny that Mr. Fulton and I let it go on."

You will pardon us?"

But Mr. Edwards had withdrawn, with a hasty bow. He wanted time and air. He finally concluded to remain until the evening train, and a boy from the hotel bore to the sanctum of the Newtown Critic a missive saying that at three o'clock that afternoon Mr. John Edwards would present himself at the Irving mansion.

At three o'clock, it was sudden, but too often is. After several hours of tete-a-tete, Mr. Edwards and Miss Irving joined the family group of whom Fulton made one.

"Gentlemen and ladies," and Edwards led Miss Irving to her mother, "a consolidation has been effected on most favorable terms."

"Smiles and congratulations went around. It seemed to have been understood from the beginning."

"Which is it to be, Critic or Journal?" questioned Fulton.

"I bow to her in that," answered Edwards. "It is the Critic, but she has promised not to be as tenacious of her own name."

"I'm a little historic name to give up, Mary," said her sister. "Mr. Edwards should take your name."

"Yes, indeed," chimed in Fulton. "I'm a little historic name to give up, Mary," said her sister. "Mr. Edwards should take your name."

"I'm a little historic name to give up, Mary," said her sister. "Mr. Edwards should take your name."

A close and exciting game of base ball was played on Bacon's field last Saturday between the Winchester High Schools and the East Woburns. The score was 4 to 3 in favor of the first mentioned club.

The Winchester Base Ball Club is practically no more. Although it had received substantial aid from townsmen, still the constant changing of players prevented anything like concentrated and harmonious work, consequently they were generally defeated.

Mr. John Maxwell has begun work on rebuilding his factory and is pushing things along as fast as a large crew of carpenters can do the work. The new building will be near the railroad, the old one and its dimensions are 125 feet long by 46 feet wide, four stories. This will be a grand building as one will readily see and will afford employment to a large number of men. He wants it finished Sept. 1, but it will probably take a few weeks longer than that.

Mr. S. B. White has been consulted by the committee of the Calumet Club, recently appointed to procure enlarged quarters, as to the feasibility of procuring them in his new block. It is understood that no arrangements were made, as the lease of the present quarters does not expire until next June, and it is not believed anything will be done before that time. The old library room in Brown & Stanton block, together with the town officers' rooms, are being considered by the committee. Perhaps when Mr. Miller erects his proposed new building, accommodations can be found in it.—Star.—The Club deserve better quarters than at present occupied.

EIGHT

Woman's Column.

Mrs. John Smith.

Editors Woman's Journal:
A friend asks me: Should a man register his family at a hotel in the following fashion: "John Smith, wife, child and nurse?"

In my judgment to do so is simply to perpetrate a crude reminder of the days when a wife could be bought for so many pence, as many deer skins, etc. She had no existence except in relation to the man who had purchased her, and to whom she belonged as literally as his horse or dog. In these days a wife is first of all an individual in her own right, and the first right of any human being is to a name by which she is differentiated from the rest of creation.

Emile Oliver, of France, one of the greatest statesmen of our day, wrote a book in which he proved that the natural method of tracing descent is on the mother's side, the difficulties of doing so on the father's side being sufficiently apparent to any reflective mind. He thought the household name should always include the name borne by the mother before her marriage, if indeed it should not supplant that of the husband. We do not here advocate this view, but firmly believe that the woman's name should be associated with that of the husband and form a dual household name. Meanwhile, in the interest of good English, let us beg John Smith to do at least as much for the on-going cause of woman as to register after this fashion: Mr. and Mrs. John Smith.

The printer girls of Topeka, Kan., have organized "The Leading Club," named after Mrs. Frank Leslie. They will soon issue the first number of the Printer Girl, which will be the organ of the printer girls of the United States.

The Quaker City has been rather severe on two hundred young women who applied for admission to the public normal school. Despite the fact that there is an unfinished story in the building and $25,000 in the treasury, it is found impossible to admit the girls.—Boston Record.

The Boston Traveller expresses the feeling of many when it says the announcement that Anna Dickinson is to speak again in England, let us beg John Smith to do at least as much for the on-going cause of woman as to register after this fashion: Mr. and Mrs. John Smith.

The true reformer dares to be in the right with the majority of the future, rather than in the wrong with the majority of to-day. He does not yield to that subtlest peril of this age of organization, the temptation to sacrifice individuality, to despair of being able to do anything as an individual, either in a friendly organization or against an unfriendly one.—Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts.

Next year a general congress of women will be held in Paris to celebrate the centenary of the great revolution. The congress will be under the auspices of the Women's League and the Female Federation. Mlle. Barbesrouse, a school mistress is the president, and she will be assisted in her labors by M. Alix, a well-known supporter of the interests of women. The congress is to be a national one for the space of three weeks, after which for eight days women from all parts of the globe will be invited to take part. Politics will be rigidly excluded, the business to be dealt with being other practical questions that concern women. At a meeting on the twenty-second inst., it was stated that about twenty-five thousand women would be invited, and that they could bring their husbands with them. The men, however, are not to take part in the discussion.

The Woman's World for August is opened by "Carmen Silva," the Queen of Rumania, who has an enviable reputation in the world of letters. Her majesty's contribution is a story, "Deceitful Daughter," translated into English under her superintendence, by Mrs. E. B. Mawer, of Bucharest. Following this flight of royal fancy comes a paper descriptive of "Auntie's Adventures in Egypt," showing how ladies who are now mummies adorned themselves in the days of Ramesses. There are two papers on "Some Irish Industries," "The Poppy Weavers of Dublin," by Charlotte O'Connor-Eccles, and "The Knitters of the Rosses," by Dorothy Roberts. A poem by Elizabeth Rachel Chapman is followed by a bright description of "Children's Dresses in this Century," by Constance Wilde. Amusing illustrations accompany this article. There is a practical paper on "Working Woman's Guild. The fashions, which occupy an important place, are by Mrs. Johnstone admirably set forth. The fashion illustrations have the merit of being pictures of human beings, instead of wooden blocks clothed in the latest styles.

A gifted woman of Lincoln, Neb., asked her colored friend to read the record of the Constitutional Amendment giving the ballot to women. He smiled broadly, made a deprecating gesture, and went off to the polls with these words: "I'd like to, ever so much, Mrs. Elliot, to please you, but really, I don't think women's got the capacity."—Painesville Telegraph.

It is stated on good authority that tobacco-smoking, in some if not all of the departments in Washington, is pursued to such an extent as to render the lady clerks sometimes positively ill, and that they have no redress. This is a curious commentary on the barbarism of our so-called civilization, and on the chivalry of smoking men.

Laxador is the remedy now mostly relied upon when a good purgative family medicine is needed. All druggists sell it for twenty-five cents a package.

The delectable preparations of opium for the baby are rapidly disappearing before the use of Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. Sold by all druggists.

Green tulle and velvet make the foundation and background of many of the most stylish bonnets, for mid-summer and early fall.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is designed for those who need a medicine to purify their blood. No other preparation so well meets this want. It increases the appetite and rejuvenates the whole system. Its record for forty years is one of constant triumph over disease.

MAIL CARRIERS' EXPERIENCES.

Some of the Tales They Can Tell—Chat with a Reporter.

What family jars has the letter carrier witnessed, of what romantic stories has he carried to the love sick maiden, which she has tenderly placed beneath her pillow at night, to sleep and to dream on. Then again what bitter memories have some of his errands evoked! What aching hearts have longed for absent loved ones, for some message that would tell of their existence, and when death rapped at the door the letter carrier was the first to bear the announcement.

These were the thoughts that suggested themselves to a reporter the other day as he contemplated "one of the best" hurrying along from door to door of a populous tenement district. The shrill whistle sounded at frequent intervals denoted his coming, and from window and basement dozens of heads protruded and asked the one all absorbing question, "Anything for me?" It was amusing to see their different expressions as they received the little envelopes. Some were enraptured and kissed the paper passionately, while others frowned and glanced anxiously at the carrier. One woman, who had been waiting for a bill, asked the carrier to demand payment for an overdue bill, or perhaps the scrawl meant even more.

You would like to know just what kind of life this "one" carried. "Well, it is not quite as rosy as it appears. It is getting better, however, every year, and now that we are about to participate in the light of the eight hour law work will be more pleasant."

The reporter had followed the carrier from block to block until every letter had been delivered. Then, let us beg John Smith to do at least as much for the on-going cause of woman as to register after this fashion: Mr. and Mrs. John Smith.

"I don't know of any business where we see more of human life than ours," he continued. "The lights and shadows of life are pretty distinctly marked and we see them both. Sometimes we feel just as much pleasure in delivering a letter as we do in getting it. Sometimes when an omnibus black bordered envelope falls into our hands we are sorry that we have to deliver it. Just what we will have to wait after the rearrangement I do not know."

"At present our duties are pretty onerous. In the branch offices collectors have to report as early as 4 o'clock in the morning, or five minutes before the regular time for starting out. Forty-five minutes are then consumed in collecting from the various boxes, after which we return to the station with the mail. Then we start to face up."

"You don't know what facing up means? Well, that is what we call sorting our mail and getting it in order for delivery. Facing up takes the time up to 6 o'clock. Then we start out and deliver the letters. We make a prompt return to the office. Collections have to be made. The letters have been made and again we start facing up."

"Every trip is but a repetition of the other. We make them hourly, and are kept constantly on the move until 11 o'clock. Then we swing in, and we call taking a rest. In other words, there is no work for us to do until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Then we come on again and work until the darkness of evening has fallen over the city."

"You want to know what we see on the route?" and the letter carrier dusted a few grains of cigar ashes from his bag. "Well, it is funny just what we do see then again it is sad. The saddest of all my experience occurred one day when I delivered a letter to an old man who lived alone in a fashionable house on Park row. It was a mourning letter, and as I handed it to him the old man's fingers trembled. He tore it open convulsively, and as he read the lines he uttered a low cry and fell into my arms. The letter was from his daughter, who lived with her brothers in a fashionable house up town. It stated that her mother, the old man's wife, was dead and would be buried that afternoon. The old man warned her father not to attend the funeral or there would be a scene, as his own sons would not permit him to do so."

"He wept as he told me his story. There had been a quarrel, and he had been driven from home. He had never darkened it since that time. That day his duties brought me around Grace church. I saw the funeral cortege, but what attracted me most was the figure of the old man outside on the sidewalk. His life quivered with emotion as he saw the casket that contained the remains of his wife, but he dared not touch it. He held a daisy in his hand, perhaps in remembrance of his wife and her ways, and he was still turning it idly when I passed along."

"Yes, it is a funny kind of life, half sunshine, half clouds. We have our own troubles to worry us as well as other people's. We meet all nationalities, and hear all kinds of languages spoken. We get letters with writing such as none could write. I have seen letters that were written in the most beautiful cursive and looked out for long letters, and are held responsible for any error. Log letters are undirected ones. We are supposed to deliver all the letters, and see that they get to their proper destination. Well, it is time for me to start, so good-by, and the letter carrier walked briskly away.—New York Star.

In a Jamaica Kitchen. The kitchen, which is always an outside cabin, is minus a chimney; an elevated sort of range or hob is built out on the floor, on which the cooking is done, sometimes by means of charcoal, but oftener with brushwood and smaller sticks, the smoke escaping through a hole in the roof. There is generally an old fashioned brick oven outside for baking bread, but it is seldom used, as few families now bake their own bread. They buy it if near or in a village from a baker's cart which makes its rounds in the country from the morning to the evening. It can be procured for twice a week. Many households do without the article altogether, or only get enough to serve with "coarse" morning coffee, a small bit of toast being put with each cup. They use in its place some of the substitutes of which are classed under the one generic term, "bread." These consist of potatoes, rice, cooked yam plantains, "banane" and "cassava cakes," both of which are breads made from the grated manioc root. From such staples is also prepared.—Detroit Free Press.

Beauty Without Paint. "What makes my skin so dark and muddy? My cheeks are so sunken and cadid. I use the best cosmetics made." "I use what a lovely man called 'Pain.' The doctor said 'remember this. If you use any more of that 'Pain' paint, discard the powder and the paint. 'The proper thing for all such skin troubles is a good purgative. It clears the blood and makes it pure.' Let this be your only remedy." Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do this without fail. It has no equal. All druggists.

"Gentleman—'How is your wife coming?' Uncle Rastus (with a sigh) 'De ole 'oman, Sah, am jes de same; she haint no bettah, an' she haint no wuss. Is gittin discouraged, Mistah Smiff, 'deed I is.'"

The Verdant Unanims. W. D. Sult, Druggist, Rippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recall the Electric Balm as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of 10 years standing." Abraham H. H. Druggist, Belleville, Ill., affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in twenty years experience, is Electric Balm. Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Balm cures all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at H. L. Flanders & Co."

The "bang" is going out of fashion in London, and high intelligent foreheads are again the mode.

"Springfield, Mass., April 15, 1881. 'I have been sick with pleurisy and pneumonia. It left me with a very hard, hacking cough. All the physicians and medicines did me no good. A friend advised me to try Adams's Botanic Cough Balsam, and to the effect of which I have more than all the doctors and medicines I have tried; and I shall recommend it far and near.'—MARY A. BUCKWELL."

Judge Simpson. Of the Superior Court writes: From mental exhaustion my nervous system became shattered, and I was utterly unable to sleep nights. Sulphur Bitters cured me and my sleep is now sound, sweet and refreshing.

THE BALKAN PENINSULA.

Thomas Stevens Writes About the Greek Peasant Woman—Her Weakness.

The Greek women impressed me as being the brightest and most intelligent of any in the Balkan peninsula. The peasant women are less employed in the drudgery of field work than other their Serbian or Bulgarian sisters. The result of this is a more refined and feminine appearance, which, per se, renders them more attractive. Besides this, they are intellectually superior, and almost all are possessed of an elementary education.

The Greek peasant understands the art of making herself attractive far better than the Bulgarian maiden does. She is, in fact, a more desirable commodity of the matrimonial market than the latter, from various standpoints; for, in addition to her other charms, her father, instead of requiring purchase money at her lover's hands, gives a dowry. She is the object of a good deal of chivalrous attention from her male relatives, which surrounds her with an additional halo of romance, and suggests to some extent the devotion of the knights of ancient Greece. If her father be a man of limited fortune, her brothers consider it a point of honor to contribute their own little savings toward making her marriage portion up to a respectable sum.

Although the Greek peasant woman works less in the fields, this does not mean that she is wanting in industriousness. Her hands are less encumbered with the hoe or reaping hook, they are deft enough in weaving and spinning the rude native textures for clothing the people, and she becomes really an artist in her own home, in the weaving and training the grape vines, making wine, butter, cheese, and all the little work about the farm.

The lighter costume of the Greek peasant woman is picturesque enough, but in one feature at least it seemed to me rather wanting in gracefulness. On her head is worn either a gaudily colored check or a small cap, elaborately embroidered or strung with coins. A short, rakish looking jacket of green or blue cloth is profusely trimmed with gold braid down the back, and often falling within a foot of the ground, are long, luxuriant black tresses, usually in two braids. From the waist down her costume is highly suggestive of an ancient Greek, all further to call the garment skirt or pantaloons was always a question with me. From the waist downward it got fuller and fuller until reaching the bottom of the skirt, which was a hole in either side at the bottom, through which the feet appear. When walking, the "languish" of her gait waggles about like the tail of a cat, which few, I believe, have ever thought to be the poetry of motion.

The Greek female, charming though she is on general principles, and, moreover, a wife and mother, has many little weaknesses. The women that I chatted and laughed and showed their faces of pearls to me were nearly all addicted to the use of the cigarette. The very thing that I had seen in the picture of the Greek woman, who appeared also led me to believe them vain and envious of their neighbor's superior, or fancifully superior clothes. This I subsequently learned to be a pronounced trait of their character. Their love of finery, of outshining their neighbors and acquaintances in gorgeousness of apparel, is one of their strongest ambitions. Few Greek women in their country, who they manage to keep one costume, made gorgeous with gold thread and elaborate embroidery, to appear in on gala days or on visiting the city. The custom of wearing Greek maiden, away off in some obscure agricultural community, manages somehow to keep herself informed of the fashions, and, after a manner, to follow them.—Thomas Stevens in Woman.

Chocolate in Guatemala. In Guatemala chocolate has always been made in the form of round cakes of varying thickness, and during the administration of President Carrera, who governed from 1850 to 1865, the Guatemaltecos, during the hardest days of their journey, they were obliged to walk up the long hills, urging along the horses, which accomplished about three yards at a step, and the driver volunteered a piece of valuable information.

"Folks generally swear here," said he, "that the Guatemaltecos are fair. Which is why I just finished this fair champion of justice, literally repeating her opening proposition, 'that there ought to be a society for the suppression or regulation of amateur industry.'—New York Times.

New Method of "Sweeping." As a party of Scotch concert singers was traveling in Australia, the members of it were obliged to take an exceedingly difficult road in order to follow their countrymen, the Scotch, from Perth to Sydney. The Envelope for Few. Never was a more elegant envelope. Few are the male offenders in this respect, but many, alas! the culprits of the gentler sex. A square envelope, large or small, but especially large, is anathema in the eyes of the five or six ladies who use an oblong envelope of a moderately large size—a government No. 4 1/2 or No. 5, corresponding nearly to the ordinary stationery envelope. The ladies, however, for writing purposes and for small manuscripts. An envelope which the enclosure can just be squeezed into is an anathema to the ladies, and they will return the letter to its envelope, and see it break open the whole edge.—Horace London in The Writer.

Some of Edison's Tricks.

Years ago, when Thomas A. Edison was a telegraph operator in the office of the old Franklin company, on Wall street, New York, he was continually getting himself into trouble by perpetrating electrical pranks on his brother operators. The instruments in those days were placed on self like desks ranged along the walls of the operating room, and Edison's place was in a corner of the room. Here he concocted all schemes for rendering life miserable to every one and everything about him.

The office seemed the rendezvous of the cuckooches in the lower part of the city, and Edison's place was a place to exterminate them one by one. He rigged up a wire along the wall, and then catching one of the insects put it to death in the short and painless fashion approved by Commodore Gerry. One by one the insects were "sparked out" of existence until finally Edison became known to the Franklin boys as "Cockroach Tom."

In the clock room was a large tank generally filled with ice water, beside which hung a tin dipper on a nail in the wall. The clock boys, who were 100 cobs of Fuller battery, strong enough to make one think he had been struck by the paddle wheel of a Fall River steamer. The tank was a large one, and Edison placed a sign below the dipper requesting all to "please return this dipper." His request was heeded. The dipper was used for hands are less encumbered with the hoe or reaping hook, they are deft enough in weaving and spinning the rude native textures for clothing the people, and she becomes really an artist in her own home, in the weaving and training the grape vines, making wine, butter, cheese, and all the little work about the farm.

Literary Notices.

As promptly as the heavenly luminary itself, the New Moon for August appears on our table, filled as usual with choice stanzas, spicy comment on political and other topics, wise and witty sayings from leading writers, and departments for the young people and the housekeeper. It is handsomely printed on good paper, and is a delight to the eye of the newspaper man. It begins to take pride in its age, for it will soon enter on its eighth year, and the fact that it is furnished for the low price of one dollar a year is an indication that there is ample capital behind it to push it to the front of American magazines. Its growth is a steady and normal one, and it fills a place in American journalism that no other publication attempts to secure. It is indeed a people's magazine, for the low price places it within the reach of every one, while at the same time its high moral tone commends it to the most fastidious. By mentioning this paper and sending ten cents to THE NEW MOON Publishing Co., Lowell, Mass., you can receive two specimen copies.

The Midsummer issue of THE AMERICAN MAGAZINE abounds with interesting and timely literature. Dr. W. F. Hutchinson presents the fourth of his finely illustrated articles in the series. Among the Canadian tales, in his instance dealing with Trinidad. An other entertaining paper is entitled Where Burgoyne Surrendered, in which is described the Saratoga Monument that is soon to be unveiled. Frederick G. Schwatka tells about the American Arctic Savage and Trebor Old has an illustrated paper on Six Story Tellers for Children, in which are some of the lives and work of Louise Imogen Guiney, Margaret Sidney, Mrs. Abby Morton Diaz, Nora Perry, Mrs. Lizzie W. Chapman and Alice Wellington Rollins. Joel Benton has a poem on Midsummer, and Sara F. Goodrich describes The Country in Midsummer. Two Coronets is continued. Additional poems are an Indian Love Song, Frederick H. of Germany, and August. The short stories are a feature of the issue: Anna Vernon Dorsey writes on A Summer Episode in Washington, Dr. A. S. Isaacs has an amusing sketch entitled She Would Write for the Magazine, and Mary W. Kramer furnishes an entertaining story on Father-in-Law—a companion picture to the well known Mother-in-Law. The Department under the general caption of Our Cabinet are filled with useful and interesting matter. The Editor's Study is devoted to questions of the day. Dr. Hutchinson has his regular monthly health article; Literature and Book Reviews receive special treatment, and the Portfolio is devoted to an amusing travesty on The Quixote and the Dead. In Timely Topics a plan for the Unification of America is outlined.

All boys will enjoy the frontispiece of the August Wife Awake, a well Canadian river scene, also the accompanying story Saved on the Brink, and both boys and girls will have great fun over A Necktie Party, for it is a jolly story. One of the most beautiful things in the number is The Temple of Music, and teaches that he who loses his life shall find it; all who have ever given up an ideal for the sake of duty will be the happier for reading this exquisite story. In The Elephants of an Indian Prince Miss Risley Seward offers the most entertaining elephant article ever written. Pets in Artist Life has some beautiful pictures and some very amusing anecdotes. There is a charming little tale for little folks about two little girls and a Sub and Edward Everett Hale writes about Boston Common as it was in Revolutionary Days, and the article has Henry Bacon's famous picture of The Boston School Boys and General Gage. Dr. Garnett has a witty Chinese story called The Rewards of Industry. Mrs. James T. Fields contributes A Helping Hand, written for good people from School—a noble story. Double Roses, relates the over throw of Phyllis and Bluebell, and Plucky Smalls shows how the Government decorated Plucky with a medal—this story is altogether delightful. Margaret Sidney contributes The Little Town-Maid, which is a most pathetic article for a university student. "Flirtie are a universal attraction—a pretty paper about The English Daisy, written among English daisies, an article on Hans Andersen, an account of the baby Bud-das in Thibet by Mrs. Leonowens, instructions how to make a handy microscope, together with Tangles, Letters from Children, poems, prize-questions and pictures. 20 cents a number. D. Lothrop Company, Boston.

Interested People. Advertising a patent medicine is the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam, for Coughs and Colds, does it. It is not a mere advertisement, but a Buss, druggist, to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The Large Bottles are 50c and 81c. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption.

Base Ball Notes.

The East Woburns played a return game with the Eastmonts last Friday morning and the latter club proceeded to treat them even worse than on the previous day, defeating them 35 to 21.

The St. Charles will play the Mathews of Lowell on the home grounds tomorrow afternoon. We would advise all lovers of base ball to witness this game as both clubs are very strong and will play their best.

The St. Charles club and a large number of admirers and would-be spectators went over to the home field to meet the Chelsea Base Ball Club who were to play here last Saturday, but who for some unaccountable reason did not arrive and the audience gathered there had to be contented with a picked nine game.

The Woburn Highlands Base Ball Club want to play with any strong team on Labor Day, Sept. 3. The Highlands team is made up of the following named: Joseph Claffy, Edward Murphy, Thomas Brennan, James Rooney, Lawrence Claffy, Thomas Scanlan, Thomas Roach, Thomas O'Donnell, Charles Claffy.

The St. Charles were to play the St. Marys of Dedham at a parish picnic of the that town at Highland Lake, last Monday, but on account of the severe rainstorm, the game as well as the picnic had to be postponed. Father Johnson received them very kindly and pressed upon them a $10 bill, although there was no game. He telegraphed them not to come but they had gone before the telegram was received.

Wonder who was filling up the editor of the Arlington Advocate on the St. Charles-Arlington base ball game played there a week ago Saturday? Evidently he didn't witness the game himself and from the numerous misstatements we doubt if he wrote the article—certainly not from his personal knowledge of the facts. "But it turned out a wretched fizzle, owing to the action of the visitors," he writes of the game. If the umpire was at fault, as he states, then why charge his defects to the club with whom he came? They had nothing to do with the matter except to play their best, and the "actions of the visitors" were those of gentlemen and entirely consistent with good ball playing. Perhaps, if the game was a "wretched fizzle," as he terms it, he might look at the cause of its being so by looking a little nearer home. If he would look at the score, he would find that the Arlington made two runs in one inning and two in the next, instead of, as he credits them, making in one inning, "in spite of the umpire," "four more runs." The score at the finish was 7—4 instead of 6—4, as his paper had it, and there are other errors in his score which so change it from the official one that it looks like a mean perversion on the part of whoever made it out for the paper. The umpire is a young man, who, although not a scientific ball player, nor versed in every point of umpiring, knows the fundamental rules of the game, and his errors were ones of judgment, not intentional "roastings," nor the result of a previous agreement with the club with whom he went, as the article in the Advocate would seem to imply. There was nothing in the report of the game, we noticed, which referred to a certain $6 which was to have been paid the St. Charles for their expenses in going to Arlington and back, although they never received it. Taken as a whole, the report of the game is a remarkable queer one and the three ways in which we try to explain it are that Editor Parker never wrote the article; that if he did, he did not witness the game as a reporter for his paper, and wrote the article on somebody's information, that somebody presumably a player; or that he knows but very little about the national game.

Literary Notices.

THE MUSICAL HERALD, published by the Musical Herald Co., Boston, for this month, is one of the best yet produced. It is as fresh and bright as a morning-glory.

St. Nicholas for August is chiefly an outdoor number. F. H. Lungen has drawn a frontispiece, in the Park; The Story of the Sea-Serpent is told by Edward Irenaeus Stevenson; E. S. Brooks describes A Roman Man-of-War's Man. In Little Moccasins's Ride on the Thunder-Horse, Colonel Gudgeon tells an exciting story of a little Indian boy. In Tom, Dick and Harry on the Coast of Maine, Mr. D. C. Beard brings back some former favorites, recounting with pen and pencil their vacation exploits. The Bell-Buoy's Story is a delightful story, and is beautifully illustrated by A. H. Davies. Shadow Pantomimos gives directions for a summer-evening entertainment. Mrs. Olive Thorne Miller writes of The Dear Dolls. Ramabai is a short account of a noble Hindu woman, who is trying to educate the girls of India. Two Little Confederates is continued; Richard Malcolm Johnston begins the recital of the old days of Little Joe Temple. Charles Henry Webb tells us all about Mr. Crowley, the four-handed guest of the Central Park Museum, and William H. Rideing has an interesting paper concerning Children and Authors. John Burroughs has an article on Observing Little Things, and warns us of the danger in arriving at hasty conclusions. There are poems and verses by Eben E. Roxford, Eudora S. Bumstead, Dora Read Goodale, and J. G. Francis; and the Departments are strong in their customary features.

The Century keeps its custom of making the August a Midsummer Holiday Number. The points of novelty in this number are the beginning of an ingeniously planned story in three parts by Thomas A. Janvier, author of Ivory Black stories, and an astronomical series by Professor Holden of the Lick University. Mr. Janvier's new serial is called A Mexican Campaign. It need hardly be said that this is not a new War Series, although the chapters of the first part are named The Mobilization of the Troops, The Parley Under False Colors, and the Stirrings at Buena Vista. Professor Holden will publish two articles on Sideral Astronomy, old and new. The one now given briefly chronicles the data which astronomy has collected up to date; it tells of the methods of naming the stars, their number, the star charts, catalogues, etc. Those articles are appropriate to the star-gazing season. The frontispiece of August CENTURY is a portrait of George Kennan in his study, drawn by Henry Sandham, and shows the celebrated traveler at work on his Siberian papers. The article giving a sketch of his life is by Miss Anna Laurens Dawes, daughter of the Massachusetts senator. Kennan's own article in this number describes his Meeting with the Political Exiles. Some of the other articles, a number of them handsomely illustrated, are: A Home of the Silent Brotherhood, Lincoln Cathedral, The Experiments of Miss Sally Cash, Home Culture Clubs, The Pulpit for To-day, a fiction of the Lincoln History, several poems by well-known writers, "Topics of the Times," Open Letters, Brice-Brae, etc.

The more work there is to do in this country, the higher the wages that will be paid for doing of it. When the market for your product is depressed and the manufacturer is begging for buyers, then wages go down. Is it not clear then that that policy which secures the largest amount of work to be done at home, is the policy which will secure to our laboring men steady employment, the best wages? A policy that will transfer work from our mines and our factories to foreign mines and foreign factories inevitably tends to the depression of wages here.—Benjamin Harrison.

Woman's Column.

She Saved the Railroad.

"Miss Mary Garrett, the daughter of the founder of Baltimore and Ohio Railroad system, is an extraordinary woman," said a gentleman well acquainted with the facts, "but she is a woman, she would today be president of the road." Miss Garrett has never obliterated her individuality in the management of the great property which her father left at his death, but her influence and capacity have been felt and recognized by every one who has come in contact with her in the management of Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.

Miss Garrett today, although few persons know it, controls and manages the Garrett interest in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and has for some time been the most potent factor in the manipulations of the interests of that great corporation. She is thoroughly acquainted with all the details of the business of the road and its financial status, and has always been looked upon as one of the most sagacious advisers.

Although personally directing the management of a property worth not less than $20,000,000, Miss Garrett is almost unknown to business men, because her modesty will not permit her to assume individual and personal control which both her capacity for financial affairs and direct control of millions of money would enable her to do.

When her father was living, Miss Garrett was his private secretary, his best adviser and his most trusted friend, even above any of his children, except his sons. It was in this capacity that she obtained her knowledge of the road and her insight into its financial affairs. After the death of her father, Miss Garrett's influence over her brother, Robert Garrett, was so marked that it became a matter of current talk in Baltimore. But there were certain theories held by her brother which even the influence which she had over him could not successfully combat. When the schemes which led to the invocation of the aid of the Drexel syndicate culminated, Robert Garrett saw the wisdom of his sister's counsel, which he had failed to follow, and practically surrendered to her the management of his interest in the road. When he started on his tour around the world, his sister followed and overtook him at San Francisco, where he was induced to give her the control of all his interests in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.

Recently, when the syndicate which had helped the Baltimore and Ohio out of the difficulties in which it had unwittingly been plunged began to haggle about the commission, and threatened to place the road in an embarrassing position, Miss Garrett quietly brushed them all aside, put up the needed cash, and saved the credit of the company.

Since the recent death of her brother, T. Harrison Garrett, Miss Mary Garrett's control of the Garrett estate has become practically unlimited during Robert Garrett's absence from the United States.

Miss Garrett is most unassuming, and would never be taken for a great financier as she is, at first sight. She is not fond of notoriety, and in manners and habits is a most domestic and homeliving woman.—Philadelphia Record.

Why Shouldn't She Be President?

Editor's Woman's Journal.

The conclusion has in it so much of the stupidity that remains to us as a reminder of the age of brute force that I can hardly read it with patience. I should like to have any one show a reason why the woman characterized as this article characterizes Miss Garrett, should not be the president of a railroad? What sort of a fine sense of modesty and "self-respect" is it that will not permit her to assume an individual and personal control, which both a capacity for financial affairs and direct control of millions of money would enable her to do? I stoutly maintain that nothing in the world holds her back from being at the head of the road, she belongs, except a false sense of time, womanhood and reserve. The law of survival of the fittest is never violated without loss, and I hope to live to see this noble and gifted woman where she belongs; namely, as her father's successor in the presidency of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Yours in the interests of common sense, FRANCES E. WILLARD.

The Westminster and Lantham Gazette quotes a letter from one of the English delegates to the International Council of Women, who says: "So many American women have soft grey hair; it is very beautiful, but the result, I believe, of over heated rooms. It is the only fault I have to find with life here. The steam-heat is intolerable to me. This house is over eighty degrees, and I feel dry and parched and flushed, necessitating very light clothing, whilst the Americans literally put on shawls. They seem amazed at my walking powers, and not wearing velvety gowns."

The New Century Guild of Workingwomen, at Philadelphia, has made arrangements to send out, by the day or the half-day, expert persons to sweep, dust, do chamber-work, clean silver, wash windows, and all the many things necessary to keep a house in order. It is thought that the better class of help can be thus obtained from young women who do not object to do the work, but to the living out.

Was America Ever Discovered?

At the time when Columbus started in search of the New World, nearly every man, woman and child in Europe insisted that there was no New World to discover. When he came back, crowned with success, a large proportion of these good people adhered to their theory, and if they were alive to-day many of them would doubtless insist that America had never been discovered at all. A mild in Europe insisted that there was no New World to discover. When he came back, crowned with success, a large proportion of these good people adhered to their theory, and if they were alive to-day many of them would doubtless insist that America had never been discovered at all. For example, look at the individuals who still maintain that consumption is incurable. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has cured thousands upon thousands of cases, and will cure thousands more, but these people can't give up their point. Nevertheless the "Discovery" will cure any case of consumption, if taken in time.

The Democrats are so mad that the Republicans have a score or more of leaders who create enthusiasm wherever they go that they just hate Mr. Blaine because he is so popular.

PEACE AND LOVE.

Sweetheart, if Peace and Love were one, How golden bright, from sun to sun, The summer hours would come and go, So drenched with love and peace and joy.

And when the peace and love were one, How golden bright, from sun to sun, The summer hours would come and go, So drenched with love and peace and joy.

Yet if we "twist the twin must choose, If either Peace or Love must lose, Shall we not cry, 'Come, Love, with Peace, With Peace and Love return again?'

If 'twist the twin we choose? Not till Love's red rose bloom is through, Comes Peace to bloom Love's breast, With Peace and Love return again.

—Katharine F. Williams in Harper's Weekly.

She Was Thoroughly Satisfied.

It takes a good deal to disturb the equanimity of a thoroughly well ordered mind as the following incident illustrates:

Old Aunt Sally Pratt, all her life a resident of a small New England village, was one day sitting by her favorite window in an upper chamber of her house. The afternoon was warm and Aunt Sally suddenly dropped asleep. She was sleeping peacefully for some minutes, when the old lady felt forward, and to the horror of several persons who saw her, she fell out of the window to the ground below. When picked up, she gathered herself together in an amazing short time, glanced up at the window and said calmly:

"Well, well, I've often set at that window and wondered how I'd feel to go a-tumble-out it, and now I know. Well, well, well! Queer how things do turn out sometimes."

When the window had turned her out of the window gave her no concern, although she narrowly escaped being killed.—Detroit Free Press.

Science's Flesh as Food.

The explanation once offered, that the Mosaic prohibition of certain animals, especially the hog, as food, was founded in profound hygienic wisdom, is not now considered satisfactory. Pork in good condition is recognized to be as healthful food as other meats in the same condition throughout the world, and it is now considered that the prohibition in Syria as in Ohio. The modern hygienists offer most interesting notes to the etymology of their continued preservation, in the midst of a high civilization, of the religious taboo of savagery. This taboo had paramount influence beyond that of their written doctrines, in their segregation from the nations in which they have journeyed, and not only in the more strictly observed, there are evidences of their ceasing to be a peculiar people.—Science.

A Pioneer's Family Basket.

It was early in March, long years ago, when one of the pioneer settlers of Oxford county made up his mind to move his family from Massachusetts to the favorite region. He had seven little ones and feared they could not endure so long a journey and the piercing cold. How, then, to make a collection of over two hundred pounds of food, and to place the road in an embarrassing position, Miss Garrett quietly brushed them all aside, put up the needed cash, and saved the credit of the company.

Since the recent death of her brother, T. Harrison Garrett, Miss Mary Garrett's control of the Garrett estate has become practically unlimited during Robert Garrett's absence from the United States.

Uses of Muskates Fur.

A Maine fur dealer says that it is astonishing the uses to which muskates are put. The skins are taken at the city establishments, clipped, colored and put into such shape that they very closely resemble, and if not sold for that, are at least represented to be much better than they really are. The fur is never sold for what it really is, but is fixed up to look like something finer, and charged accordingly.—Boston Budget.

For Underground Electric Wires.

A Pittsburg man has invented a glass conduit which he thinks solves the problem of underground electric wires. Plates of glass are grooved on the upper surface, and the wires are laid in the grooves and cemented there with pitch. Then other plates of glass are laid over the first, and wires put upon them in the same manner. When the wires are laid the whole is enclosed in a wooden box and embedded in cement.—New York Sun.

Photographs of Lightning.

Photographs of lightning flashes, recently secured by A. H. Binden, of Wakefield, Mass., are most interesting pictures, proving the fact before suspected that the flashes have a sinuous or rotary motion, being twisted like a rope or ribbon during its progress to the earth. The pictures are of a fine quality, and very fine.—Boston Post.

How Wordsworth Composed.

THE GIANT BANYAN.

Description of the Big Tree of California's Botanical Garden.

But the great "sight" of California is unquestionably its splendid Botanical Garden, as the further shore of the Hooghly, and the giant banyan tree which stands in the midst of its palms and bamboos like a king amid his courtiers. It is truly the "tree of life" of the country, and the Canning bridge and through the endless banyans of Howrah (the Brooklyn of Calcutta) is anything but an easy enterprise to achieve satisfaction. If you start in the morning the whole journey there and back is one long martyrdom to a heat and dust and glare which only those who have been in India can truly appreciate. If you start in the evening you arrive just in time to see the whole garden vanish from your eyes into the deepening darkness of night, and have to console yourself with the thought that the time has been well spent. There was nothing to be seen, and I saw it thoroughly. The latter result attended the first effort which we ourselves made to reach the renowned banyan, and the banyan happening to be unusually full that night, our homeward drive through it in the dark, with an accompaniment of shooting and ship-cracking, was a very agreeable surprise. I vividly recalled Sir George Trevelyan's famous definition of "hill" as "a moveable island by cabmen and omnibus drivers preparatory to their next dead end."

But such a spectacle as the monster tree of Calcutta is well worth a double journey, and our second attempt was made on the morning of the 14th. From our hotel at 4 p. m., we reached the garden a little before 5, and had already driven more than half way across it when our "churn" (carriage) halted suddenly at the entrance of a long, straight, avenue flanked by two ranges of lofty trees, and our Bengal driver, pointing to the far end of it with his lean, brown forefinger, said impressively, "Dekho burrah gach wahan hai" (look, there is the big tree).

We followed the pointing finger with our eyes, but nothing came of it, and we were left to wonder how the path seemed to lead itself, and this was all we could make out till we got within about 100 yards of it. Then, to our amazement, we found that the supposed tree was all one giant tree, and that its countless trunks were nothing more than the shoots which it had sent down into the earth from its mighty boughs. To take root there and spring up again till the whole plantation was covered. After walking many yards beneath one huge bough, and noting that this giant was only one among scores—some of which, although so vast and ponderous as to need supports of solid brickwork, seem mere twigs compared with the enormous mass of the tree, I began to feel that the clearer idea of the real size of this vegetable Goliath than I could ever have gained from the inscription attached to one of its largest branches. That it is a tree of the trunk is 42 feet, that the circumference of its crown is 850, and that it has sent down into the earth 252 "aerial roots."

The same inscription tells you that the tree is more than 100 years old. When it was first planted, Warren Hastings was turning his face homeward to figure his greatest political blunder. It is said that the tree was planted by a British soldier, and that it was the first tree to be planted in the garden. The tree is a tree of the trunk is 42 feet, that the circumference of its crown is 850, and that it has sent down into the earth 252 "aerial roots."

Danger in Sea Bathing.

Sea bathing is a common, but often unsuspected, source of injury to the sense of hearing. People should always be careful how they wash their ears at home. In this respect, it is simple that they should appear, and harmless as it is in other respects, a portion of the fluid—small it may be—passes into the outer passage of the ear and becomes lodged there, and in a little time the water, which is especially in the inner half of its extent. The water which thus remains is gradually removed by evaporation and absorption, and the result is a painful inflammation of the part, and subsequent impairment of the organ of hearing. To obviate this danger stop the ears with cotton wool.

Bathing in the sea is dangerous in other ways for old people, for young children (especially before the first dentition has been completed), for persons of full habit of body, for those whose circulation is weak or irregular or who are suffering from heart disease, chronic rheumatism, or other diseases of the nervous system, or local accumulations of blood, such as hemorrhoids from the nose, lungs, etc.—Home Journal.

Folk Lore of the Oaks.

The oak is a tree celebrated in mythology and folk lore. Many of the early Jewish writers are connected with it, and the oak of Shechem, the oaks of Bashan and other trees of the kind seem to attest the importance of this tree. It was even more important to the Druids, who venerated it and its parasite, the mistletoe. Mistletoe was used by passing the sufferer under an oak branch that had taken root in the ground. Near certain oaks, people in the Northfolk stood an oak which was approached to effect a cure for the same malady. This was done by pegging a lock of hair into the tree and wrenching it from the hand.

An old German law forbade any one from cutting down an oak tree. The oak and the hazel were said to be on bad terms, and could not agree. In England this prohibition seems formerly to have included other trees.—F. S. Bassett in Globe-Democrat.

A Province of Siberia.

The city of Semipalatinsk, which has a population of about 15,000 Russians, Koryaks and Tatars, is situated on the right bank of the river Irtysh, 480 miles south-east of Omsk and about 900 miles from Timen. It is the seat of government of the province of Semipalatinsk, and is commercially a place of some importance, owing to the fact that it stands on one of the caravan routes to Tashkent and other cities of Central Asia, and is a large part of the trade of the Kirghiz steppes. The country tributary to it is a pastoral rather than an agricultural region, and of its 547,000 inhabitants, 497,000 are nomads, who live in 111,000 khitkas or felt tents, and own more than 3,000,000 head of live stock, including 70,000 camels. The province produces annually, among other things, 45,000 pounds of honey, 270,000 pounds of tobacco, 100,000 bushels of potatoes, and more than 12,000,000 bushels of grain. There are here every year within the limits of the province several commercial fairs, the transactions of which amount in the aggregate to about $1,000,000. Forty or fifty caravans leave the city of Semipalatinsk every year for various points in Mongolia and Central Asia, carrying Russian goods to the value of from $150,000 to $200,000.

It is very necessary, I suppose, to call the attention of persons who think that all of Siberia is an arctic waste to the fact that honey and tobacco are not arctic products, and that the camel is not a creature of the arctic regions. Of that enormous life in less than twelve hours after our arrival in Semipalatinsk. When we set out for a walk through the city, we found it very warm, and the thermometer indicated 80 degrees Fahrenheit in the shade with a north wind, and the inhabitants seemed to regard it as rather a cool and pleasant surprise.—George Kennan in The Century.

A Sunday's Hard Work.

Pith of the Question.

It is not a contest of capital against capital. It is not a contest of parties against parties. It is much higher than either of these. It transcends all party notices. It is: Whether the great mass of American citizens, who earn their bread by the sweat of their brows, shall be seriously reduced in their enjoyment from day to day.—JAMES G. BLAINE.

"We venture to assert that England will reap the largest benefit of any advantages that may arise from the adoption of the ideas now advocated by the free trade party in the United States.—British History Review."

CAN'T PUBLISH IT.

A few days ago we received a copy of an address "To the Women of the United States" issued by "The Woman's National Republican Committee," of which Mrs. J. Ellen Foster of Iowa is the Chairman, with a request to publish, which we most respectfully decline to do. The "Committee" appear to be self-constituted, probably for the purpose of getting hold of some of the Republican campaign money, but we do not see how we can help them. Mrs. Foster is a woman of her own way, and so long as she employed her abilities in fighting the saloon and advancing the interests of prohibition in the West all the best part of the country would be glad to see her. But she is not a woman of her own way, and so long as she employed her abilities in fighting the saloon and advancing the interests of prohibition in the West all the best part of the country would be glad to see her. But she is not a woman of her own way, and so long as she employed her abilities in fighting the saloon and advancing the interests of prohibition in the West all the best part of the country would be glad to see her.

Recently Mrs. Foster offered her services to the New York State Republican Committee who wisely declined to accept them, and her next step was to try the National Congress. What success she met with we do not know, but probably not very encouraging.

For one we would be glad to see every woman in the land take hold and help elect Harrison and Morton, and many of them will do so, we are sure.

We think much of those professional female stump orators who turn up regularly every four years for the sole purpose of helping "reduce the surplus" in the hands of National campaign committees.

SENATOR KINGSLEY FOR CONGRESS.

The Cambridge Press wants the Republicans of the Fifth District to nominate and elect Senator Kingsley of that city to succeed Congressman Hayden of Woburn this fall, providing he will accept it.

The talk about sending General Banks to Congress again, where it is not, were it, is in the interest of Senator Glines of Somerville, who as everybody knows has had the Congressional buzz in his throat for some time past. No one really believes that General Banks will have any show in the convention but he will have some delegates there and the second choice of every one of them will be Glines. That is the inside of the Banks movement.

We know but little concerning Senator Kingsley but that little is in his favor. He enjoys the reputation of being a gentleman of fine natural ability and good attainments—honest, clear, and worthy of the support of our Representatives of the Fifth District. If these things be true we can't see why his chances for the nomination are not good.

A HARRISON AND MORTON CLUB.

At a large and enthusiastic Republican caucus held at Headquarters last Monday evening to choose delegates to the State and other conventions it was voted to organize a Harrison and Morton Club for the campaign. This looks like business.

With a wide awake and efficient City Committee, a Young Men's Republican Club, and a Harrison and Morton Club, there will be lively old times here this fall. We shall have torchlight processions and brass bands by the acre.

Republican enthusiasm is at high water mark in this city. There are no doubts, fears or lakevarness anywhere in the party and each organization will do its part to make the campaign a rattler.

The Republicans have no doubt of the triumph of their ticket, hence they are happy.

Success to the Harrison and Morton Club!

THE WOBURN DELEGATES.

The friends of Gov. Ames contrasted the report that the Woburn delegates are for Gen. Draper, declaring that, on the contrary, they are in favor of Gov. Ames's renomination.—Boston Journal.

The above is probably correct. Capt. W. W. Wyman, favors Gen. Draper on the score of his army record, but the prevalent belief hereabouts is that he will not go and lend his name to the cause even if Gov. Ames is given a third nomination.

We hope the Woburn delegation will exercise wisdom in voting for a candidate and not waste their powder foolishly striving to bring down impossible game. Go for the winning man, gentlemen delegates.

Gov. Ames is again at his post of official duty. Last Tuesday, for the first time in 7 weeks, he visited the State House, and is now regularly attending to business at the old stand.

THE FISHERIES TREATY.

The United States Senate closed debate and came to a vote on the ratification of the fisheries treaty made by Secretary Bayard and the English commissioners a couple of years ago, and it was rejected 30 to 27.

Thus but for a Republican majority in the Senate the ocean fishing interests of this country would have been sacrificed either through the ignorance of the present administration or its willingness to play into British hands.

For guarding their interests and saving their rights the fishermen of this State owe the Republican majority in the Senate a debt of gratitude.

It looks as though the Draper folks had given it up—for this year at least. The press and people of the State seem to be pretty nearly unanimous in favor of Ames. Present indications point to a walkover for him in the convention and at the polls. Probably when Gen. Draper gets home from Europe he will call off his men and abandon all thought of trying to wrest the prize from Gov. Ames. It would be wise for him to do so.

The Democratic ratification meeting in Boston which has been promised ever since Cleveland and Thurman were nominated has been "indefinitely postponed," which probably means that it will not be held at all. There is no enthusiasm in the ranks of the Massachusetts Democracy this year.

Noble Roman Thurman started out on the week-end with a speech in New York making stump speeches in the West. He should remember Hendricks and go slow.

After the Maine election Blaine will make a speech on the coast, and in many of the large cities of the Union. The demand for his speeches is immense.

Woman's Column.

The Ballot For The Home.

By FRANCES E. WILLARD.

Doubtless the strongest points in favor of woman's enfranchisement are:

First. That it is founded on the unchanging principles of justice. Every reasonable man knows that it is not right to tax a class without representing that class, to inflict penalties upon a class that had no hand in determining what those penalties should be, to govern one half of the human race by the other half. All injustice to one class works harm to every other.

Second. The best government known to the race is found where a home, father and mother have equal power, as is the case in an enlightened Christian family. No other place is so free from temptation and no other conserves so completely the best interests of all who dwell therein. Reasoning from analogy, the larger home of society and the largest home of all called government, might be more like this typical home, and in proportion as they are made like unto it, society and government will more thoroughly conserve the interest of all, and shut out the pests of civilization.

Third. The two most strongly marked instincts of woman are those of protection for herself and little ones, and of love and loyalty to her husband and her son. On the other hand, the two strongest instincts that to-day defend the liquor traffic and drink habit are avarice in the dealer and appetite in the drinker. It has been said that civilization has nothing with which it can offset these two tremendous forces. But may it not be found in the home through the reserve power never yielded into government on a large scale, woman's instincts of self protection and of love are a sufficient offset to avarice and appetite and will outvote both at the polls? For must it be remembered that in a republic, all questions of morality sooner or later find their way to the ballot box and are voted upon by women.

Fourth. There are fifty-four thousand men in the penitentiaries of the United States against five thousand women. As a class, women hold the balance of power morally in the republic.

Fifth. There is no enemy deeded so much by liquor dealers and saloon keepers as a woman with a ballot in her hand. Secret circulars sent out by them and intercepted by our temperance leaders state this explicitly.

Sixth. Wherever women have had the ballot, they used it in the interest of home and against the saloons, the gambling houses, and the haunts of infamy. In Kansas 26,000 women voted in the spring of 1887. The State Librarian at Topeka carefully examined the files of eight hundred newspapers of Kansas and reports that practically without exception, they bear testimony direct and indirect, to the good behavior of women at the polls, the courteous manner in which they were treated, and the overwhelming influence they exert to favor morality.

The law in Kansas prohibits a crowd at the ballot box and requires that around it fifty feet of space shall be kept clear, persons going one by one to drop their ballots in the box. In Arkansas, woman's "ballot by signature" has cleared the saloons out of three-fourths of the counties. In Canada, five provinces gave a restricted municipal suffrage to women and the concurrent testimony of all parties and the minister of finance, Hon. George Foster, is that the result is altogether in the interest of temperance and morality.

Literary Notices.

PETERSON for September is on hand. We always feel that there is a lack in the month till this old favorite reaches us. It invariably keeps up to the mark, year after year, for first-class writers and artists furnish the literary matter and the illustrations. No pains or expense is ever spared in any department; there is only one cheap thing about PETERSON that is the price. It never fails to catch hold of any salient point in which people are interested: John Bunyan's bi-centennial is just attracting attention, and PETERSON opens with a beautifully-illustrated article on the famous man, written in charming style and giving numerous details of his life which will be new to American readers. The whole number is exactly what a September magazine ought to be—brilliant, fresh, and altogether delightful. No lady who wants the best stories, newest items in regard to dress and society-doings, as well as ample information in matters connected with the beautifying and elevating of home-life, can afford to do without PETERSON. Scores of thousands have long known the fact, and each year adds to the list of those who find this unique periodical an absolute necessity. Terms: Two Dollars a year. Address PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, 306 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

So many murderers have escaped arrest in London of late years the police are said to be losing faith in the police as agents of public safety.

"Alas! Alas!" the duke exclaims, "no slender ankle I've got pains." "Don't fret," said one, for whom he had sent, "I have some Salvation Oil."

"My time is up," said the Doctor to the patient, whom he found using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and he was correct, for his cough had been cured.

[Editorial Note.—At this period the records by the hands of Edward Johnson cease. Ill health and approaching death probably conveyed the continuance of his task to another, who proved to be his son, who continued to be his successor for a considerable period.

On the 23rd of April, 1672, Captain Edward Johnson died, at the age of 73, after a life full of honors and usefulness. The place of his burial is unknown, as no stone, according to present information, has been found standing to mark his grave. He was famous more than for any one thing, for his book, entitled the Wonder Working Providence of Zion's Saviour in New England, which was printed in London in 1653, and which is a unique and valuable history of the early settlement of New England, a subject on which his contemporaries considered him unusually well informed. As an author he was not an elegant writer; but his work contains facts no where else recorded, and is full of graphic and original expressions, which answer their purpose admirably. The ill arrangement of his matter is the fault that makes his book unreadable in the light of modern taste and greater culture. The mixture of prose and poetic composition which he attempted was a fashion of his age, and with greater education he might have been able to better purpose. Still his lines, rude as they appear, contain many choice bits of evidently accurate description, which the present time would do well to preserve. A competent scribe should have undertaken to have written a book in days when only clergymen of liberal education and a few lawyers were authors; in the days when this was an entirely new country, sparsely settled and full of hardships; a work too to be printed across the ocean in London, so far too that the author could never see the advanced sheets of his book—a fact to which may be attributed some of the mistakes which occur—is a remarkable circumstance.

There is recorded evidence on the records of the State of that time, that his knowledge of the subject, and the printed result of his labors had the confidence of his contemporaries. A copy of the original edition of his work, which was recently sold at auction in Boston for $81.

In matters of enthusiasm on religious or political subjects, he must be judged by the character of his contemporaries. It is certain he was eager in the promotion of new settlements in the infant country, and he should be held in lasting honor by the citizens of Woburn, as the foremost settler of the town and present city.

Artist Versus Cattle Dealer.

Artists can, in the course of a summer morning's walk in the country, find material for their best landscapes, and their training has been such that the knowledge so found can be applied to the best advantage. With eyes that see everything in nature, judgment that rejects the commonplace and takes cognizance of all that is valuable, and with a memory that is as faithful to retain every object as the camera, such artists represent the highest type of Nature's pupils. A taken picture memoranda of subjects, taken hastily during the walk, is all that is needed to fix the scenes and locality, and serve in the reproduction of these in the studio. The opposite type is found in a country Pittsburg cattle dealer, who, recently met for his portrait. He had just returned from a trip that extended through the grandest and most impressive scenery of the great west, and the artist—a devout lover of nature—hoped to extract from his patron some fresh ideas of the grandeur of the Rockies and the canyons of Colorado. It was a hopeless task. The cattle dealer's mind was an absolute blank as to nature's handiwork.

He was overflowing with knowledge of cattle, of a local sort, and he talked with details of the cost of raising cattle in every state and territory of the west, of the best places and the poorest; of the cost that each marketable steer represented in the hands of the dealer; of cattle from every western point to the nearest market. The artist was wearied with a surfeit of cattle knowledge and sought the cattle dealer about the mountains and the lakes and the scenic wonders of the land of cattle and canyons. It was useless. His patron, outside of his own narrow but practical field of observation, had seen and heard and read nothing. "Mountains? Really I did not notice them except to think that they seemed a good deal in the way of the railroad."—Fittsburg Bulletin.

Meisner's Method of Study.

Meisner, in order to study thoroughly the movements of the men and horses in the storming squadron in the picture "1807," he pursued, as he told us, an entirely original method. First of all, in the autumn of the year, he went to the scene of the battle, and he saw the place where the French cuirassier regiments in the time of Napoleon—Art Connoisseur.

The Woman of Bulgaria.

At home the Bulgarian woman is a sturdy, honest housewife, helpmeet to her husband in all that the term applies. Beside attending to the care of the household, she is also a hard worker, and she is a hard, grinding drudgery of the field than her husband does, and often more. Nor does she rebel at this or think it a hardship. She is accustomed to share with her brothers the labor and exposure of the fields, and at marriage her husband is required to pay her father a sum of money, and she is a hard worker, and she is a hard, grinding drudgery of the field than her husband does, and often more. ATTRACTIONS!

The 10-day camp-meeting, the particulars of which have appeared in the columns of the JOURNAL, will open on next Thursday evening, Sept. 6, and will continue over the 16th. It will be held in a fine grove near the Boston & Maine Railroad, and nothing has been left undone by the Presiding Elder and committee to make it a grand success. A large number of clergymen will attend and participate in the services, some of them the most eminent in the denomination. Rev. William A. Thurston of Oak Cottage, Wilmington, has charge of the local arrangements, which are now nearly perfected. Barges will run from the railroad station to the grove; a train will leave at 9.45 each evening for Boston via Woburn; Silver Lake Hotel will furnish rooms at very low prices. Persons who want space for tents in the grove should send in their applications at once that there may be no disappointment.

COPELAND & BOWSER,

WOBURN.

WINCHESTER.

Capt. Nickerson has got back home again.

Come and get your books: the library has been reopened.

Dr. Charles A. Winn is the last M. D. to open an office here.

The new Town House is to be lighted by electricity. Good enough!

H. F. Johnson has been visiting the White Mountain region lately.

Mrs. and Miss Maud Palmer of New Jersey are visiting friends here.

Mrs. J. A. and Miss Julia Marvin have been visiting North Conway.

Mamie L. Maxwell was a happy guest at the famous Crawford House in the White Mountains last week.

Mrs. George Richardson is enjoying life among the granite hills of N. H.

W. H. Plummer has recovered from the injury to his foot and is about his work.

William H. Herrick was a guest at the Pemberton, Hull, Nantasket Beach, last week.

Mr. C. E. Sanderson went to North Conway a short time since to join his family there.

Chairman Albert Ayer of the Selectmen will now take his vacation. He deserves one.

There is a new street-car station at the corner of Main and Park streets. Which is judicious.

Major Winn thinks there is no place like Saratoga to spend the hot weather at. He has tried it enough to know.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Pond and Mr. Preston Pond and wife were guests at the Pemberton, Nantasket, a few days since.

Principal Lovering of the High School has removed to a residence the Rolf house corner of Ash and Mr. Vernon streets.

Dr. George P. Brown's accomplished daughter Grace has had a very nice time at Hartford, Conn. It is a beautiful city, Grace thinks, and so does everybody else.

Rev. J. G. Merrill, pastor of the First Congregational Church, St. Louis, will speak at the Highland Chapel next Sunday at 3 P. M. Mr. Merrill is an able speaker, and never fails to interest children. All are invited.—Star.

If our people would buy prime soft and hard fire wood cheap they should go and see Woodard & Mentzer on Lexington street, Woburn. These men have acres of fire wood, as well as lumber, etc., which they are selling for about half what it costs at the wood-yards.

The School Board have elected, to supply the place of Miss Spaulding, late first assistant principal of the High School, Miss Myra B. Martin of Southbridge. This lady has been for some six years principal of the High School in the West. She is a fine woman, and on its abolishment was offered the position of supervisor of schools of that town, but she declined. She is said to be a teacher of ability.—Star.

North Woburn.

EDITOR OF WOBURN JOURNAL: I should like to inform the public by means of your paper of the treatment the North Woburn Base Ball Club received at the hands of the North Reading team, and to advise all ball teams to have as little as possible to do with them. They challenged to a game of ball to be played in North Woburn on the 28th of July, and when we had accepted the challenge and made all arrangements for the game they failed to show up at the appointed time, without giving any reason or notifying us before hand. As most of our team work in shops they have to lose half a day to get off and are thus put to considerable trouble and expense.

We were afterward foolish enough to make arrangements with them for another game to be played here. This time they promised faithfully that they would come and if anything should happen to prevent their doing so they would telegraph or send word to us some way two or three days before the date appointed for the game. As we did not hear from them we expected they would surely come. This time also they did not appear, to the disappointment of a large crowd who had gathered to witness the game. They have never given us any reason for their not appearing.

We want people to know what kind of a crowd they are and what their style of doing business is so that teams will know what to expect from them if they attempt to play any game with them. I would advise the North Woburn Ball Club to play any team in Woburn, St. Charles or elsewhere.

Yours respectfully,

MANAGER OF N. W. BASE BALL CLUB.

The restaurant will be in charge of a competent gentleman from Chelsea, and a skilled workman from Boston will reside over and run the barbershop. Board by day or week can be secured at the Restaurant Tent at reasonable prices.

Everything bids fair for a large and interesting meeting.

Base Ball Notes.

Tom Mulhern played in the field for the St. Charles last Saturday and filled his position in good shape.

The Crescent Baseball Club of Woburn desire a game with any 15 or 16 year old Club on Labor Day—next Monday.

Our "Dick Johnson," viz—Reddy of the St. Charles, did not have much of a show for brilliant work last Saturday, yet he succeeded in capturing one good fly.

Officer John A. Walsh doffed his regulation helmet and uniform to play in the St. Charles game last Saturday.

Mr. C. A. Bradley, manager of the St. Charles Base Ball Club received last week a handsome silver medal which will be presented to the member of this club making the highest general average during the season of 1888.

Next Saturday a good game of base ball will be played at the Stoneham B. B. Grounds, between the Stoneham and Melrose clubs, and on Labor Day the contest will be on the same grounds between the Stoneham and the Henry F. Millers.

There has been considerable rivalry and party who attend these games from Woburn and other towns will be well pleased.

The St. Charles suffered their third defeat of the season at the Parish picnic of St. Charles church from this town, at Haggart's Pond, Andover, last Sunday, at the hands of the Young Men's Total Abstinence Club of Lawrence.

The game was a poor one, and the boys made it even on an off day, their throwing in the field was very poor, and they made an exhibition of good ball playing and received much applause.

Life of Gen. Harrison.

BY GEN. LEW. WALLACE.

This book, just out, is the life of a great man by a great author.

It is a superior literary production worthy of special attention.

Both subject and author have risen by superior qualities, indomitable energy and application from the quiet walks of life to world-wide fame.

They have been life-long friends; both have had thrilling experiences on the field of battle; have served in the Council Chambers of the Nation. How fortunate that the man whose illustrious ancestry shall be put in the shade by his own elevation to the Presidency of a far greater nation and whose fitness for such a position has been so long and so fully demonstrated.

The work is issued by the Messrs. Hubbard Bros., of Philadelphia, Chicago, and Kansas City, is intensely interesting, elegantly illustrated, and is a valuable addition to the library of every reader of the Union and in the national columns and who can intelligently unfold and discuss the views of Gen. Harrison upon the national issues. One also who wishes a pen of such wonderful descriptive power as to have reached unclouded length in authorship.

WINCHESTER.

Things have been tidied up in the nearest kind of shape around the Town House.

Good progress has been made on the White Building, the plastering being about done. It is a good structure.

Chief Symmes attended the State Firemen's Association Convention at Haverhill last Wednesday.

Mr. Harry Holland, a young man well known in town, was buried last Monday from St. Mary's church.

Miss Nellie Nourse went to Lancaster, N. H., for her vacation and had a good time. Lancaster is a beautiful town.

Labor Day passed without demonstration of any kind. Large numbers went to Boston and Woburn to see the parade.

Miss Gertrude Tyler, everyone is glad to know, has recovered from a long illness and is about again. Many friends congratulate her on her recovery.

The small electric lights which are being placed on Main street are such an improvement over the gas lamps that the latter dwindle into insignificance beside them.

The Democrats held a caucus in Lycium Hall last Friday night to elect delegates to the different conventions, which used up about all the members of that party in town.

The Town officers are justly proud of the improvements in their new headquarters. The rooms have been nicely finished and furnished presenting a decided contrast to the old quarters.

Miss Bruce has established a horse car station at her dressmaking parlors near the White Building. It is just the thing that has been needed and without doubt will be largely patronized.

Miss Mary S. Spurr, daughter of the gentleman who holds about all the offices in town, will probably have some more next spring, has been tarrying at Provincetown, the extreme eastern point of the Old Bay State.

Mr. Guild of the Boston Record staff of writers gave this town a good setting up in that bright little daily one day last week. The names of many of our leading citizens appeared in the article, which, although brief, was a readable one.

The Library Trustees expect to open the Library to-day or tomorrow for the first time since vacation, although they probably will not be running smoothly until Monday. They deserve credit for the efficient manner in which they have finished the room.

Mr. S. C. Small is working for it but he hasn't had much luck enlisting recruits for the 34, or prohibitory, party here. He has made a mistake in my judgment. This is presidential year, Bro. Small, didn't you know it?
34 parties don't count.

A fine clock has been recently placed in the postoffice, on the door of which are the cards of business men in town.
As a useful and ornamental article for the postoffice and as a means of advertising the firms whose cards are contained thereon, it will be a success.

This town will probably reap the benefit of the refusal of the Trustees to place the Public Library to allow the Woburn Electric Light Company a site on the Library grounds, by getting the Company to establish their plant here.

The site spoken of is on Cross street, on Mr. James Russell's land, just beyond the railroad track.

Despite the fact that the newspapers have placed Chairman Ayer of the Selectmen on his vacation for the past couple of weeks, he is still faithful to his post in the new Town Hall building.
He says he will probably go off for a week or two the latter part of this month, but has not as yet decided upon his destination. This is authentic.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS.

The Republicans of Winchester are expected to meet on Friday evening,
Sept. 7, at 8 o'clock, in Livingston Hall, to choose delegates to attend the State, Congressional, Senatorial, Coun-ciller, and County conventions.

A full attendance is earnestly requested promptly at the hour named.

The Star had a good article last week on "Beautiful Wildwood," meaning thereby our village cemetery. It is rather a gruesome subject and only by a stretch of the imagination, or rather, a shutting of the mental eye to the realities of the theme, can one perceive much "beauty" in a graveyard; but the Star did well, and made as much out of it as anybody could.

Our people, young and old, plain and pretty, rich and comfortably well off, everybody in fact, are leisurely getting back from the seashore and mountain, and it is time. The summer is over and gone, autumn has set in with its shortened days and longer cool nights, the vacation season has come to an end, and it is meet that our people should be getting home again and settling down to the stern duties of life.

All along Highland, Washington,
Cross, Forest, and other streets in the Highlands, Richardson households are scattered thickly about and it was in this section of Winchester (then Woburn) that the ancestors of that numerous and honorable family settled 200 years ago. The Richardsons have always been prominent members of the population of Woburn and among the descendants of the early settlers have been and are now many men of note. A couple of weeks ago the descendants of Richard Richardson held a reunion at the hospitable and pleasant home of Mr. Zachariah Richardson at the Highlands. It was attended by a large number of relatives from at home and abroad and highly enjoyed by all. There were interesting readings by Mrs. Ryerson and also singing and piano solos by Miss Flora Richardson and Miss Annie Wins.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson and his to Mr. Richardson and his estimable wife the guests returned grateful thanks for their hospitality. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Wetherby of Camden, N. J., Mr. and Mrs. Raymond and daughter of Cambridge, Mr.
and Mrs. Newton of Winchester, Mrs.
Ryerson and sons of Boston Highlands,
Mr. and Mrs. Emerson of Salem.

Two daughters, Mrs. Davis of Medford and Mrs. Hilton of Lynn, and Mr. Davis.

Burlington.

Miss Estie Foster has been enjoying her vacation at Junior Point, Salem.

The schools, except the South, began, Tuesday. Miss M. E. Leslie has resigned her position at the South school.

The inhabitants of the town under the superintendence of Mr. C. Wright of Billerica, are busily engaged in grading the grounds around the church.
When completed a great improvement will be made.

On Wednesday noon of last week,
a fire was discovered in a wood lot behind the church. The fire was quickly extinguished by Mr. Samuel Sewall. The alarm was given and a large number of men soon assembled and by their prompt efforts soon extinguished the flames and prevented serious damage.

Church services were held at the Town Hall, Sunday morning. The parish committees of North Woburn and Burlington have agreed to unite for one year in hiring preachers for their respective pulpits. An agreement was also made by which the service is to be held in Burlington in the afternoon, for the next six months, and in the morning for the rest of the year.
The Sunday School will be held next Sunday at 1:30 p. m. Preaching service at 2:30.

Glimes and Kingsley.

The announcement that Senator Glimes of Somerville is not a candidate for any office this fall disposes of one name which has been mentioned in connection with the Republican nomination to Congress in the Fifth District. It is understood in Cambridge that Senator Chester W. Kingsley is definitely in the field for the Congressional nomination and the Cambridge papers give a cordial support to his candidacy.—

Fairly and Squarely in the Field.
General Banks's formal acceptance of the invitation of a large number of the Fifth District voters to become a candidate before the Republican Convention puts him fairly and squarely in the field. His letter signifying his willingness to take the nomination will be read with considerable interest in all parts of the State.—Boston Journal.

Has Horse Sense.
We cordially endorse the sentiments of respect that are being expressed by many people of all shades of political opinion for Gen. William F. Draper. He has a record as a brave and faithful soldier which nobody is disposed to baffle. We believe, and that he has served of considerable horse sense. That is why we have faith to think that he will assist in making the nomination of Gen. Ames unanimous.—Boston Herald.

If He Is Sagacious.

If General Draper is as sagacious as his friends represent it is very probable that instead of allowing his name to be presented to a vote in the convention, he will be able to make a statement which cannot be by any possibility held out to him the promise of victory. The tide is against him this year, as it is judged against all others, and Governor Ames is bound to be his own successor. The fact may not be welcome, but it is none
the less indisputable.—Salem News.

He is going to.

Base Ball Notes.

Although Begley did the batting of the day for his side last Monday hard luck prevented him from scoring as often as he should.

Roddy had on his batting clothes last Monday. A baseball, a two-bagger, with two runs is a showing not to be sneezed at, any day in the week.

The Lake Views and the Woburn Highlands played a six-inning game on Sunday's Field last Monday morning, which resulted in a victory for the former.
Score 10 to 9.

Manager Bradley received a very friendly letter from Manager Dowd of the Mathews inviting him and his club
as well as members of the Temperance Society to attend the festivities at Lowell on October 10.

The St. Charles will play the St.
Stephens at Charlestown to-morrow, and if the "Charles" have the good fortune to win will then play off the existing bet between the two clubs for the Temperance League championship.

About 200 people witnessed the game between the St. Charles and the Woburn and the Mathews of Lowell on the grounds of the former club, last Monday, Labor Day. The game opened auspiciously for the home club the game in the fifth inning standing 8 to 4 in their favor. The next inning was a fruitful one for the visitors, the umpire presenting them five runs, and again in the eighth when the home team were full, a long fly was knocked out on the foul side of third base, which, however the umpire either couldn't or wouldn't see and three runs more added to the list. The St. Charles added two more to their score and then on account

NOMINATED A MUGGUMP.

Ever since the nomination of Gen. Banks for Congress by the Republicans of this District the Democrats have been busily hunting for somebody to run against him. First they coaxed one and then another of their big men to take the nomination, but all to no purpose; nobody could be found to accept the empty honor. Things ran along until last Tuesday when they held their convention at Cambridge and still no Democrat had been found who would consent to stand up to be knocked down by Gen. Banks.

But something must be done and somebody nominated. The list of available Democrats had been exhausted without securing a candidate for the race, and yet a candidate must be had. In their extremity the name of Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, the eminent Cambridge Mugump, was suggested, and in less than time it takes to tell the story Col. Higginson was nominated and the convention was running wild over it. Such enthusiasm over the selection of a candidate has hardly ever been witnessed before.

Four years ago the party took Robert Treat Paine, a Republican for their candidate; this year they take Col. Higginson, a life-long Republican up to 4 years ago and a rank Mugump now; and if they keep on long enough perhaps they may get a Democrat to take the nomination some time or other in the distant future. Col. Higginson is "one of them literary fellows," is comparatively poor in this world's goods, and won't make nearly as good picking for the hungry Democracy as poor Paine did, and yet Col. Charles H. Taylor, Editor-in-Chief of the Boston Globe, was nominated for Elector.

A STALWART VICTORY.

At an adjourned session of the 3d Congressional District convention held last Tuesday evening Hon. Alonson W. Reed, ex-State Treasurer, was nominated to represent that District in Congress by a handsome majority. At the first session of the convention there were 3 candidates neither of which could win unless a break should occur in the ranks of some one of them. The break came at the second session in the person of one of the candidates, Hon. Edward L. Pierce, who withdrew from the contest and made it possible for the Beard men to achieve an easy triumph. He won in the next round.

Mr. Beard is a stalwart Republican after the strictest sect. He is true-blue, is an advocate of the highest kind of a Protective Tariff. He is a friend of the laboring man. No sneer of political duopoly about his garments. And with whip his antagonist out of his boots at the polls next November.

HOME MARKET CLUB.

The above Boston organization is doing yeoman's service in the cause of Protection to American Industries and Labor by publishing and widely distributing among the people the best kind of protection literature. One of the latest of their publications is a pamphlet containing the joint debates on "Protection vs. Free Trade" between Hon. Benjamin Butterworth, M. C. from Ohio, and Everett P. Wheeler, President of the New York Free Trade Club, held at Tremont Temple, Boston, on the 20th and 21st of March, which throws more light on the tariff question than any other speeches or writings that are now called to mind. It ought to be generally read.

We will furnish this pamphlet and other publications of the Home Market Club free to all who will take the trouble to call at the JOURNAL office for them.

At the Middlesex Republican Convention held at Lowell last Tuesday the following gentlemen were nominated by acclamation: Joseph O. Hayden of Somerville for County Treasurer; J. H. Tyler of Winchester for Register of Probate; J. P. Thompson of Lowell for Register of Deeds for the North District. By ballot, Charles B. Stevens of Cambridge was nominated for Register of Deeds for the South District; and Samuel O. Upham of Waltham for County Commissioner. The following named gentlemen were chosen to constitute a Republican County Committee: John L. Sargent of Braintree, J. Wesley Kimball of Newton, Henry W. Pitman of Somerville, A. D. Fessenden of Townsend, Lyman Hall of Cambridge, James Pierce of Malden, A. G. Pollard of Lowell, W. A. Alley of Marlboro, G. C. Bent of Cambridge.

The Arlington Advocate tells the Republicans of the Fifth District that they are under no obligations to vote for Gen. Banks for Congress, and advises them not to do so. There is no law against giving such advice or forwarding it that we have ever heard of. Nevertheless, in all human probability General Banks will be elected by a handsome majority over anybody the Democrats may see fit to put against him.

Do our eyes deceive us, or have the 3d party people placed the portrait of Gen. Harrison on the Vice Presidential side of their flag floats so proudly over the street in front of the Dow Block? Numerous good art judges say it is Harrison's likeness.

Those of our readers about to purchase a piano should not fail to get fully posted on all the latest and best improvements in the Henry F. Miller Pianos. This old and reliable concern will mail free to any of our readers their handsome illustrated catalogue.

Next Tuesday morning Copeland & Bowser will offer for sale at the remarkable low price of $2.50 per pair, 65 pairs of white blankets of a superior quality. For full particulars read the advertisement of this date, and then lose no time in calling there.

We trust the women of this town will improve the little time left them to get assessed. Their votes will be of vast importance in the next election of Mr. Giles, the School Board. Hurry up, ladies, and see that your neighbors go to the Assessors office.

Mr. John Duncan, Manager of the Boston Clothing House, has recovered from his late illness and has gone to New York City for a visit. He will return the last of next week. During his absence Mr. Giles, the senior proprietor, will superintend the business.

Mr. Herbert L. Clarke, the cornet soloist of the Band of the City of New York, who will render a composition entitled "Facilia," at the organ recital advertised in our columns, has won several prizes in public musical contests in Canada and the United States. Among them is a prize correct valued at one hundred dollars. The programmes for this concert will be issued a week in advance, and it will be thus seen that a very rare and attractive selection of pieces will be performed.

—The "Line Gate" struck this latitude last Tuesday night and for goodly hours of hours things rattled. The rain poured in torrents during the night and forenoon Wednesday, and some pretensions to believe another flood was at hand. It was a big game anyhow.

—Mr. J. H. Nason, whose card appears in this paper, has a neat, commodious store in Allen Block, opposite the postoffice, and an excellent stock of boots and shoes to fill it with. He offers strong inducements, in price and quality of goods, for the patronage of our friends, and is sure to give them a good share of his patronage.

—It was Mrs. and not Mr. George Buchanan who forwarded to our domestic the other evening his dish of altogether the most toothsome morsels that we have sampled this season, and it is to Mrs. Buchanan, instead of Mr., that the best thanks of our family are hereby returned.

—There will be a meeting of the Harrison and Morton Trenchard Battalion at the Republican Headquarters on this Friday, evening, at 7:30 o'clock sharp, for business purposes. Republicans of Woburn are earnestly desired to attend this meeting and join the Battalion, the ranks of which are rapidly filling up. Kelly, Boylston.

—The station which Mr. Jacob M. Ellis of this city is building at Winter Hill, Somerville, on the Boston & Maine, Lowell, is, in its style and material, a fine example of stopping off these some day and note down some particulars which will enable us to give a complete description of the building, which is going to be a handsome station-house.

—H. L. Flinders & Co., the enterprising successors to W. H. Hill, Pharmacists, have recently moved to their new premises, the cars of the No. Woburn and East Middlesex Street Railway lines, a large part of which they have rented to private parties for advertising their business. H. L. Flinders & Co. have some more space left which they will dispose of at fair rates.

—The Boston School of Oratory so thoroughly applied its "Dolores" system to the command of the attention of every one contemplating a public life. The fact that Dorey's Dure of the Union Sq. Company, Miss Mabel Grant, the daughter of the late Blanche Daly and Miss Alice Crawford of the Dalys, are graduates from this School is sufficient recommendation.

—It seems well settled among all parties that M. T. Allen, Esq., is to have a re-nomination and election to the Legislature this fall. Our town couldn't do better than give him another term; Allen is a man of high character and of good principles. He stood up in his boots and sustained all the best measures of the General Court last winter, and asked no odds of anybody. He's a clean.

—Col. George L. Perkins of Haverhill, Mass., who has just celebrated his 100th anniversary (see Sunday Globe, Aug. 5, 1888), never allowed while in the army to pass his threshold. In his beautiful letter to young men he says: "Keep the taste simple, read and read freely, make a grand life of it." Schuchter's "What is the best." Pennock & Son, Agents.

—Last Monday afternoon Dr. Reynolds joined the large party of Raymond, excursions and left for the N. Y. & N. E. railroad at 3:30 for a fortnight's tour through the South. The party will visit New York City, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Gettysburg and other points of interest, and singular of which Dr. Reynolds proposes to enjoy to the full extent of his abilities. James Skinner, secretary, Julia C. Mehan, treasurer, Terence J. Maguire.

—Mr. Amos Cummings feels it in his bones that trade is going to be tight here this fall. He sees the sure signs of it, and he is not at all mistaken. The thing is general among business men. To be all prepared for the boom whose approach is felt and the rambling of whose wheels is heard, is a prudent business man. To be all ready to meet the crash of the wheels, is a prudent business man. To be all ready to meet the crash of the wheels, is a prudent business man.

COPELAND & BOWSER,

WINCHESTER.

The High School is well filled this year.

Hereafter the Gifford School will be "run" by Miss Amanda Holton.

General Corse has had the grounds around his summer home here tidied up in fine shape.

The Star thinks the 34 party people are engaged in a still hunt and working pretty hard. Mobly.

Mr. S. W. Twombly has a nice house for sale. It is situated near his own residence and is very desirable.

Col. Nat. Richardson can hold his own with the best of them on the tariff question. He can make a rattling good speech on the subject.

Our best citizens are highly pleased because Mr. Dwinell is likely to represent this Senatorial District in the next Legislature. He is a sound Republican, level-headed man, and an estimable citizen.

Miss E. D. Bearse of South Boston occupies the position in the Mystic School made vacant by the resignation of Miss Mary Holden who has been elected to an honorable position in the public schools of Athol.

All stories are true, we are soon to have a fire alarm system in operation here that will take the persimmons. It is a novel arrangement, comparatively inexpensive, and entirely efficient. Go ahead, firemen.

Mr. Fred. H. Page, President of the Republican Club here, is a capital stump speaker. He talks good sense with ease and grace of language and never experiences any trouble in holding an audience. Mr. Page is entirely at home on the tariff question.

There are more cases of typhoid fever in town than was ever before known at one time, at least, so says one of our most popular and successful doctors. From our own knowledge he is about right. —Star. Guess there is a screw loose in that statement somewhere, eh?

Won't Winchester put on airs, though, when she's represented in both branches of the Legislature. There is a fair prospect of her being so honored, but she will also honor the State as well. Winchester has just cause to be proud of her public men. —Star. In very deed she has.

At the annual meeting of the Winchester Village Improvement Society held Thursday evening, Sept. 20, the following officers for 1888-9 were unanimously elected: —President, Samuel W. Twombly; Vice Presidents, S. W. Reynolds, H. F. Johnson; Directors, T. P. Wilson, S. C. Small, Preston Pond, C. F. Lunt; Treasurer, Edward H. Rice; Secretary, Edward A. Smith.

Mr. William S. Walbridge has recently had built for himself one of the neatest and most comfortable residences in Winchester. It is situated in the beautiful Rangle's region of the town, and while its architecture is generally odd, and its interior is a little unbecomingly pleasing to the eye and agreeable to a well educated artistic taste. It makes a nice home for a deserving gentleman and his family.

Beautiful Styles and very, very cheap.

Patrons of a New York theatre were treated with lemonade instead of water the other night, owing to a rivalry between a tobaccoist and a soda fountain proprietor in the lobby.

TO ALL persons interested in the estate of Joshua Sewall,

Woman's Column.

It is not Christ only but priestcraft that has subjected women as we find her. Instead of taking the truths of the Bible in corroboration of the right, the practice has been to turn over its pages to find example and authority for the wrong—for the existing abuses of society.—Lucenia Mott.

I find that in these days, opposition to woman's public work and woman's ballot are largely fanciful; and prejudice melts like hoar frost in presence of practical proofs that "for a that and a that" a woman can still be womanly.—Francis E. Willard.

The California Christian Advocate, published at San Francisco, utters no uncertain sound in regard to the recent decision against woman suffrage in Washington Territory. It says: "It was an unjust judgment. The people of the Territory are in favor of female suffrage and passed the law accordingly. It was hotly opposed by the saloon keepers, gamblers and roughs generally. The female suffrage was the cause of the law. The people of Washington Territory will have it, notwithstanding. We desire to see woman possess the only power a politician dreams—that is, the power to vote."

The editor of the Advocate, it is said, had a chance to see something of the practical effects of woman suffrage when he was Presiding Elder of the Methodist churches in Wyoming.

Two Louisiana ladies, Mrs. M. L. Horrick and Mrs. E. L. Newman, have been chosen as members of the School Board of West Carroll, a parish in the north eastern part of the state. They are the first women in Louisiana to hold such a position, although women have been eligible as members of school boards since 1879. Efforts have been made from time to time to secure the appointment of women, but the former Governor was opposed to it and nothing was done. Governor Nichols is now in sympathy with modern ideas and this good action, once introduced, will be sure to spread.

Mrs. L. C. French of Knoxville, Tenn., lately before the State Teachers' Association at Cleveland, Ohio, in favor of wider educational and business opportunities for Southern women. The plea is remarkably frank, spirited and logical. Mrs. French admits that every woman ought to have a home but calls attention to the absurdity of debarring woman from work outside the home on the ground that home is her divinely ordained sphere, when war, emigration and vice have made it impossible for so many women to have husbands. Mrs. French says:

"Will not God's plan be sooner carried out if woman makes a home for herself than if it is never made at all? How is it that the world's conscience cries out against the woman going out of the home to occupy lucrative offices and positions of trust and honor, but remains silent and indifferent when she is forced out of it into low, mean and even shameful positions?"

We have individual friends in all parties who favor our enfranchisement. This whole question is to me so much a matter of growth and enlightenment that I could not but feel that we should secure and maintain the right of suffrage until the sense of right and justice is sufficiently developed in men to concede that woman is equally entitled to the expression of her opinion by the ballot without reference to the success or failure of any party. The reason I have come to these conclusions is the manner in which the women of New Jersey were treated, then the women of Utah and now the women of Washington Territory.—Zerelda G. Wallace.

Mrs. Funi Ando, the wife of the Japanese Consul-General at Honolulu, devotes her time largely to temperance work. Her husband is in full sympathy with her and supports her efforts by his influence both in public and in private. He often presides over the temperance meetings and gives instructive lectures. The society is growing powerful and is having an excellent effect on the three thousands Japanese in Hawaii.

Dr. Marie Haspel, who went from Indianapolis, Ind., last spring to Ceylon to find out what she does not shopping in Wuchang, as she would be dangerous even to ride in an open chair on some of the streets. She never walks, unaccompanied, even on the private streets, and "may understand the full meaning of liberty, freedom, etc." before she returns to the United States.

Mary Whiteley, the sister-in-law of the keeper, and Maud King, aged thirteen, granddaughters of the captain of the light house at Point Pluckney, S. C., have been recommended to the Secretary of the Treasury by the Light-house Board as in every respect worthy of the gold medals awarded by the Government for heroism in saving human lives. On August 21, at the risk of their own lives, they went out in a boat in a heavy gale and rescued three men and a boy, whose boat had been capsized.

Queen Victoria deserves a vote of thanks from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. She took the Windsor Castle cats with her when she went to Osborne for the summer, and so many fashionable ladies have followed the royal example as to give a distinct impetus to the trade in wicker baskets, besides saving much suffering to innocent animals.

At an examination for admission to the Free College, New York, seventy-eight per cent of the girls seeking admission passed a creditable examination, while only forty-eight per cent of the boy applicants were able to enter.

No stone yet marks the place where Wendell Phillips is buried in the old cemetery at Milton, Mass., but a monument is soon to be erected by Mrs. Green, his sister. It will be a rough weather stained granite boulder, about five feet in height, and in the front centre will be a sunken tablet, bearing an inscription.

When symptoms of malaria appear, in any form, take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It will prevent a development of the system. A cure is warranted in every instance.

[Oct. 22, 1673. Mr. Carter's arrears ordered to be paid.] The selectmen met, and receiving from Mr. Thomas Carter a bill, wherein several persons are behind in paying their arrears to the ministry, have ordered, that the constable shall forthwith demand of the several persons expressed in that bill, the full sums there due; and if they refuse to pay, to take it by distress, and return it to our pastor.

[Apr. 6, 1667. John Winn and the Wymans' agreement about Mount Pleasant Field.] Francis and John Winn, who had agreed before the selectmen, with Joseph Winn, about the fencing of Mount Pleasant Field, Joseph Winn had conveyed to him in general, and to set up twenty and five feet of fence on the west side of the said field, next the Mountain Corner, and to maintain it forever; and if the said Winn should desire to be in particular again, then he is to be on his own charge, and to maintain the general fence; and every year, at the end of the year, and this was their mutual agreement before the selectmen.
